Thrillseekers' fun dives with Evel

by JOE SWICKARD

There were hundreds of Evel Knievels seated in comfortable upholstered seats in the darkened Lincoln Village Theater in Chicago. In their minds, they weren't suburban stockbrokers or city gas station jockeys. THEY were poised on the edge of the Snake River Canyon, ready to defy death to achieve the American dream of wealth and happiness. Palms were wet with nervous sweat as well as slick from buttered popcorn as Brooks Brothers-clad Cadillac drivers rubbed shoulders with leather-jacketed "chopper" riders to watch Evel carry his hopes (and theirs) across the gaping Snake River canyon on his steam-powered rocket/"cycle."

ABOUT 150 persons bought their all-cotton mementoes to remind them of the bright Sunday afternoon spent watching Knievel, 34, fall in his attempt to span the canyon. The lobby is carpeted and the management served complimentary coffee to the patrons. Outside, chopped Harleys and their riders arrived, announced by tuned exhaust pipes. Inside the lobby, middle-class heads instinctively turned to the noise. Carefully stained and worn denims were the Chicago bikers' colors in grimy contrast to the pure white modified rock 'n' roll leather suit worn by Evel. "Evel's the American ideal, man. He said he was going to do it and I'm going to do it," said the biker with the coiled cobra tattoo. The cobra-man's buddy chipped in: "He doesn't want to die. Let me tell ya, when you've got three or four million dollars, there ain't no way you want to die."

duced their red tickets for the ushers and swaggered in. They were soon to be lost in the dark of the theater. THE THEATER was about three-quarters sold at $10 per seat. The audience was quiet, predominantly middle-class and all white. They were soothed with canned music. They came in family groups, sometimes three generations together for a Sunday afternoon. The children, as young as five and six, chattered excitedly about Evel. He was always "Evel" when there's a possibility that someone is going to kill himself before your eyes and you've paid $10 for the view, it's strictly on a first name only basis. Three teen-age boys arrived, found seats and one ran back for the buttered popcorn. Sliding into their seats and looping their legs over the seat in front, one said, "It's amazing the way he bounces."

you ever really see him? He looks like a dummy." The house lights dimmed and the theater broke into cheers, whistles, and cat-calls. It was like the giant cartoon carnivals where mothers can ditch their kids on dollar day in Peoria. The screen flickered with diagonals slashes and the image of Snake Canyon, Idaho, came into blurry view. It focused to the strains of the "Ballad of Evel Knievel." The chaplain of Bourbon street was introduced, and he asked the audience to pray with him. This was the event, he intoned, that we all are "blowing our heads to watch." He ended his prayer. "It's fun to be saved. Amen." And the audience cheered. People took the opportunity during the exhibitions of an African psychic riding blindfolded through flames and spears and the feats of Sensational Parker "king of the sway pole." to run out for more refreshments.

The T-shirt man admitted he was doing OK. He also works the auto and dog shows. "IF HE DIES, I don't know," he shrugged. "Probably raise the price, it would be a commemorative item, I guess," he said. Evel appeared on the screen, greeted by applause from the audience. He seemed nervous and hyperventilating. He told the closed-circuit crowd to "live like God made you to" and not to take narcotics. While Evel made his last-minute preparations, film clips of his accidents were shown. In slow motion again and again he tumbled, clothes tearing and bones breaking. People gasped and whispered in the dark. Evel was hoisted into the X-2 rocket "cycle" with a crane and was strapped in. One of the teen-agers hunched further into his seat, and said slowly, "Go get 'em, Evel. Get down."

Pollution tests ordered for Heritage Park

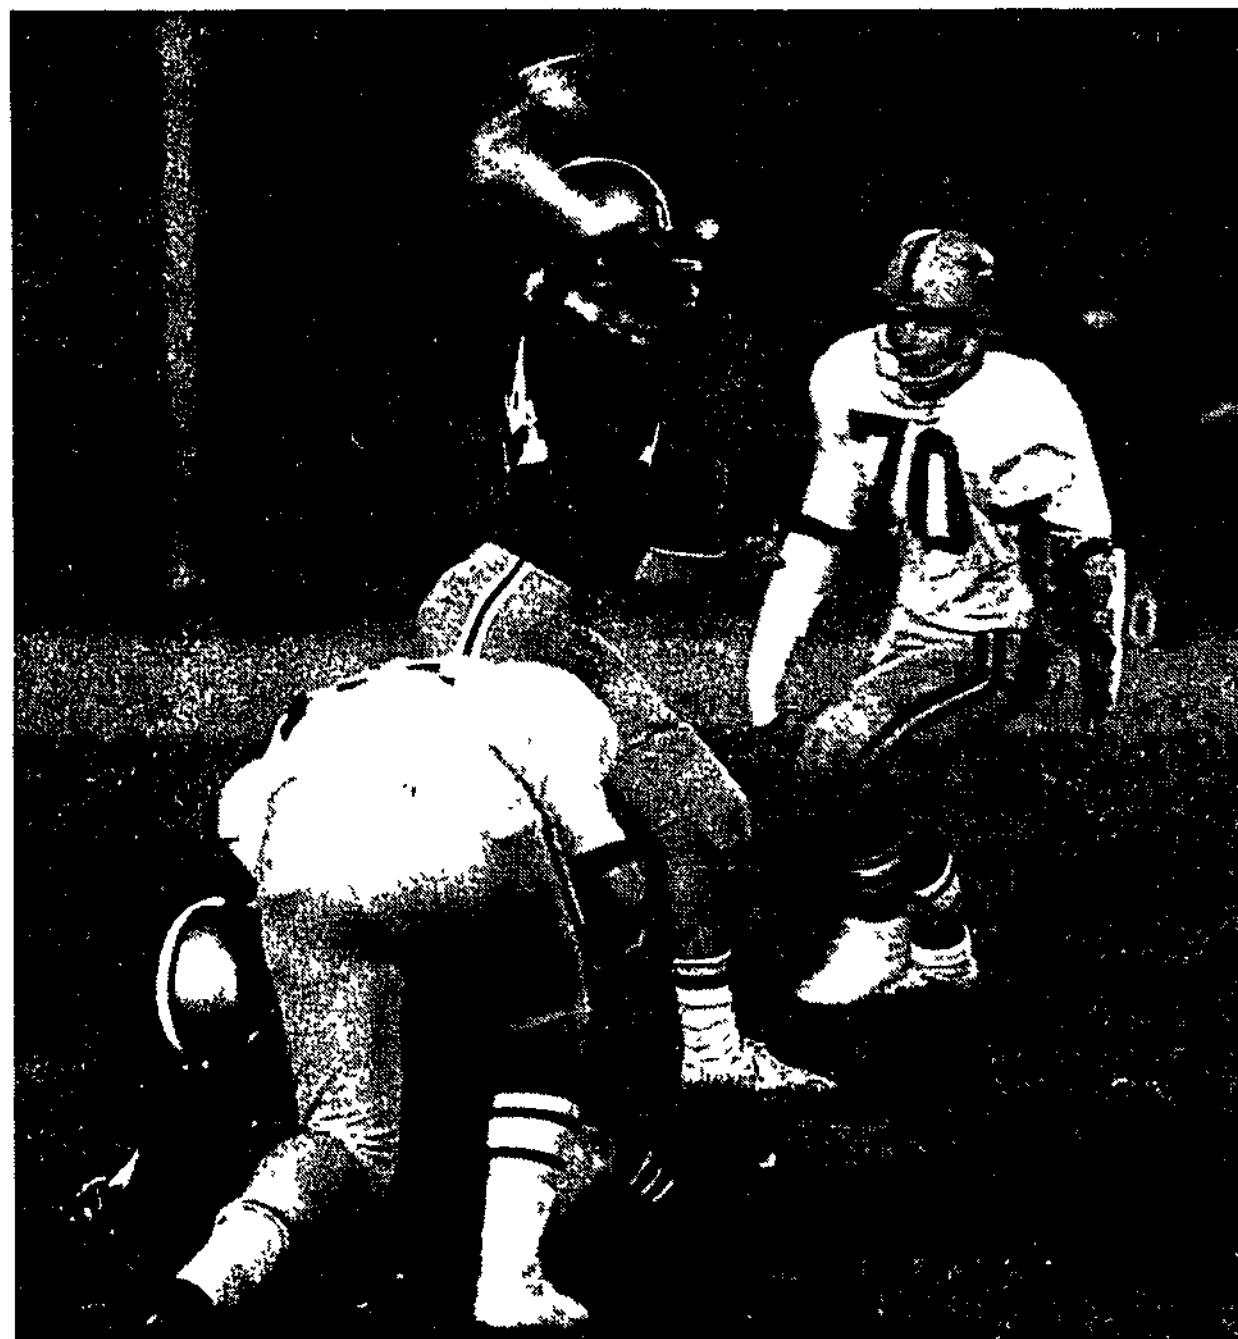

A "fish kill" in early August has prompted the Wheeling Park Board to order that water samples be taken to test for possible pollution of the Heritage Park west retention basin. The board became aware of the kill when Craig Stryzyk, 15, of 386 S. Jeffery Ln., asked the commissioners if anything had been put in the basin between Aug. 1 and Aug. 12. He said he returned from vacation to find between 300 and 400 dead fish on the basin's banks. Stryzyk said he has been fishing in the retention basin for several years and said the dead fish included many "good-sized" bass and a baby northern pike. "I think something is being dumped in from one of the industries," Stryzyk said. He offered to take water samples for the district to have tested. PARK BOARD members said that it is possible that one of the industries west or south of the basin may have dumped something into the sewers that drain into the basin. They noted that a 60-inch sewer pipe was installed last year to drain the Dunhurst area and several industries. They said drainage from this pipe might have killed the fish. Park board Pres. Robert Ross said that the fish might have died from natural causes when the water plants in the basin bloomed. "You always get a fish kill when the lake blooms," he said. The commissioners, however, said the matter should be thoroughly investigated. They ordered the superintendent to have water samples taken Friday morning and to get a map of the village drainage system to determine what areas empty into the basin. "If it happened once, it can happen again, and we could end up with a stagnant pool of water," said Comr. Lorraine Lark. "We could lose what little recreation we have there," Comr. Hugh Wilson said.

STRYSZYK TOLD the board that since the August fish kill no other fish appear to have died. He also noted that none of the scavenger fish that live at the bottom of the basin were among those killed. In addition to the fish kill, Stryzyk also said that the southwest end of the basin is littered with old car parts and other garbage. Park board members said that this section of the basin is not on park property, and therefore they cannot take action concerning the garbage. The commissioners said that although the pollution may be entering from this southwest part of the basin, the park board does have legal recourse since it affects the entire basin.

Valenza slated to appear in court today

Former Wheeling trustee Michael Valenza will appear in U. S. District Court at 10 a.m. today to request a reduction in his nine-month prison sentence for conspiracy to commit extortion. Valenza, who was scheduled to begin his sentence Aug. 23, was granted a delay so he could be in court to argue for a reduced sentence before Judge Bernard Decker. The former trustee pleaded guilty Feb. 28 to conspiring with then Wheeling Building Director William Biebler to extort $10,000 of furniture from Wickes, Inc. He is one of six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials indicted Jan. 31 following a year-long federal probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers. Four of the six have pleaded guilty and three have been sentenced to prison terms. The U. S. Attorney's Office has testified that Valenza cooperated fully in the Wheeling investigation. The former trustee testified before a grand jury the day he was arrested, and also testified at the trial of former trustee William Hart. Valenza's attorney is expected to use his clients' cooperation with the government in his arguments for reduced sentence.

Parks seek fast action on flood basin

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Park District commissioners plan to appeal to the Metropolitan Sanitary District for speedy action on promised improvements to the Heritage Park west retention basin. They also plan to inform the sanitary district that they will sue if the improvements are not begun shortly. The park commissioners are considering a suit against both the sanitary district and the Village of Wheeling for failing to complete work on the 20-acre basin. LAND FOR THE basin was donated by the park district in 1969 with the understanding that the retention lake would be used for boating and fishing. The basin never has been used for recreation because of its depth and size, and park board members describe it as a "mud-hole" and an "eyesore." Board members decided to appeal to the MSD after expressing displeasure with the village's response to their request for a timetable on the Heritage Park basin improvements. They said the letter from Village Mgr. George Passolt contained none of the requested information. "As far as I'm concerned this says nothing," Park Pres. Robert Ross said of the letter. "There is no such thing as a timetable in this letter." In the letter, Passolt told the park board that the village plans to meet with the sanitary district to discuss the project as soon as reports from village engineers are reviewed. No dates were mentioned. THE PARK BOARD is concerned about improvements to the basin because a series of improvements promised in a 1972 referendum now are under way. They said they have put up with the basin in its present condition for five years. A proposal to meet with the village (Continued on page 5)

Trustee plans 'better communications'

Wheeling Trustee John Koeppen said he plans to propose a program that will put the village board in contact with the residents several times a year. Koeppen said the program will be similar to the accountability sessions sponsored by the board earlier this year. During a series of six sessions, the village board traveled to various neighborhood schools in the community to discuss problems with residents. "I think it is good to get to the people in the community. I think we straightened a lot of the problems and let the people know you can talk to a board member," Koeppen said of the sessions this winter. THE TRUSTEE declined to outline his idea for the new program, saying that it is not fully developed. He said he will present his program once he has taken care of some personal business obligations. The program may be delayed until at least next summer because of the upcoming village elections, Koeppen said. He said the politics involved in the election might prevent the program from actually establishing better communication between residents and the board members. Noting the need for contact between the trustees and the public, Koeppen said he thinks the sessions should be scheduled more than once a year. "I think personally it should happen twice a year, not on the basis we did in a couple of weeks," he said, referring to the fact that the accountability sessions took place in a two-month period. SINCE THE accountability sessions, the village board has changed its procecedure for allowing residents to address the board at its regular meetings. Previously, residents had to request time before the board several days in advance of the meeting. Now residents merely sign a sheet immediately prior to the start of the meeting. Despite this change, Koeppen said the accountability-type sessions are needed because many residents do not feel they can attend village board meetings. He said many residents feel strange about attending the meetings, but might attend a gathering in their neighborhood.

Shift 20% of flights to Midway: Young

U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, will seek assistance of federal agencies in trying to shift 20 per cent of airline flights using O'Hare Airport to Midway Airport. "I'd like to see the shift of flights. It would certainly reduce noise at O'Hare and also benefit the economy around the Midway area," he said. Young predicted new federal regulations will be announced in the next several months requiring retrofitting of older jetliners with noise-muffling equipment and use of the quieter two-stage landing procedure.

U.S. can't keep up with aliens

Because of a manpower shortage, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service will no longer deport illegal aliens unless they have been accused of crimes. "What has happened is that the rate of illegal aliens coming into the Chicago district, including Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana, is accelerating," said Robert Germaine, assistant director of the agency's Chicago office. "They're coming in faster than our 80 investigators can keep up with."

Body found at Arlington Park

The partially decomposed body of a 37-year-old man was discovered in a tack room at Arlington Park Race Track early Sunday. Arlington Heights police said the man, Robert Kranz, is believed to have been a stable worker. Police have not determined the cause of death but said Kranz had a history of poor health. He apparently had been dead for several days.

Schaumburg school attendance up

Enrollment in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 increased by 857 students this fall. The number of students is now 16,385, up 5.5 per cent from last year's 15,528 total. This year's increase was less than the 1,949 increase in 1973 but still within the anticipated growth range, said Milton Derr, associate superintendent.

Valenza seeks cut in sentence

Former Wheeling trustee Michael Valenza will appear in U.S. District Court today to request a reduction in his nine-month prison sentence for conspiracy to commit extortion. The former official pleaded guilty Feb. 29 to conspiring with the Building Director William Fieber to extort $10,000 worth of furniture from Wickes Inc., which was seeking approval of a new store in Wheeling. Three others, including political boss James Stavros, have also pleaded guilty in the shakedown scandal.

Track ends season on $ note

Arlington Park Race Track closed out one of the most successful horse racing seasons in Illinois history Saturday. Total wagering increased 21 per cent over 1973 and attendance was up 18 per cent. "The Chicago racing public's response to the Illinois Racing Board's awarding of the complete summer dates to Arlington and the improvement of the quality of thoroughbred racing here it engendered has been dramatic," said John F. Loomer, track president.

Vandals strike industrial park

A wave of vandalism in Centex Industrial Park in Elk Grove Village continued over the weekend as vandals shattered plate-glass windows of at least 35 business buildings. A total of at least 71 window-breaking incidents occurred between Wednesday and Sunday, with damage estimated as high as $20,000 to $25,000.

Teachers seek mediator's aid

High School Dist. 211 teachers have asked the board of education to resume salary negotiations with the help of an outside mediator. Carl Flaks, president of the Dist. 211 Education Assn., said he has prepared a revised salary proposal after a survey of teachers last week. He said the survey gave a "clear indication of the main reasons" for the teachers' narrow rejection of an earlier contract proposal but would not elaborate on the survey findings.

NEC rehires two Dwyer teachers as substitutes

by WANDALYN RICE

Two uncertified teachers dropped from the staff of Dwyer School two weeks ago were hired as substitute teachers for the Dwyer junior high school program Saturday by the Northwest Education Cooperative governing board.

The NEC board, with two dissenting votes, voted to rehire Michael Biskupski and Bryan Smith as substitutes for the program for emotionally disturbed children until fully qualified teachers can be hired for the program. Board Pres. Edith Freund of Mount Prospect Dist. 57 and Carl Poch of Prospect Heights Dist. 23 voted against the move.

NEC officials said that hiring Biskupski and Smith temporarily will increase the number of teachers available for the junior high program to four. Plans call for six full-time teachers for the 39 students in the junior high school program.

SPECIAL EDUCATION director John Wightman, who is acting director of the Dwyer program, said the junior high program did not start as scheduled last week because of the shortage of qualified teachers. He said eight students who were to move from the Dwyer elementary program to the junior high program stayed with teachers in the Dwyer elementary program last week.

This week, Wightman said, those eight students and 20 students continuing in the program from last year will begin working with the four available teachers at the program's location at Hoffman Estates High School. Eleven other students will start in about a month, hopefully with six fully qualified teachers, Wightman said.

Wightman said he now has two qualified applicants for the junior high school jobs, but does not know when they will be able to start because they must give notice to their present employer.

Biskupski and Smith had been dropped from the program because they did not have the state certification needed as special education teachers. Biskupski was employed for two years as a teacher in the program and Smith taught there for one year.

Their alleged lack of qualifications was one of the charges made against the program this summer by County School Supt. Richard Martwick and a group of teachers from the Dwyer program. Martwick also charged that children were beaten by large wooden paddles and that the program's director John Whipple was unqualified. Whipple was reassigned by the NEC board in July.

FOLLOWING THE board's action Saturday, Biskupski said he and Smith still hope to qualify for permanent jobs in the program by getting their certificates approved. Biskupski said the board's action "is a holding action as far as I'm concerned until we find out where we are with certification."

Mrs. Freund said she opposed the hiring of Biskupski and Smith as substitutes because "I don't think this is the appropriate solution to the Dwyer program. I would rather see us hire people who had not delayed in getting their certification."

In other action Saturday, the board approved a written policy statement on corporal punishment which is basically the same as the unwritten policy NEC officials said was in effect when the alleged incidents of "child abuse" occurred.

The written policy prohibits the use of corporal punishment unless the practice is agreed on by all professionals working with the child and parental permission is obtained. It limits punishment to "a swat of reasonable force, considering the size and age of the child, on the clothed seat of the child."

Ford grants Nixon pardon to 'shut book'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A prayerful President Ford Sunday granted Richard M. Nixon unconditional pardon for any offenses in order to "firmly shut and seal this book" for the nation and for Nixon himself. Stunned Congressmen expressed both praise and outrage, and Nixon said he was grateful.

The White House said Ford sweated out his decision alone over the past week without consulting Nixon, but the former President issued a statement within minutes, sorrowing over the "mistakes" he had made but conceding no criminal wrongdoing.

White House switchboard operators said they were besieged by "angry calls, heavy and constant" soon after the President made his announcement.

Ford put forth his historic — and immediately controversial — decision by summoning newsmen to his Oval Office on Sunday morning and reading to them in solemn and somber tones from a long prepared statement.

"I do believe the buck stops here," Ford said, and concluded with an official proclamation that granted Nixon a "full, free and absolute pardon" for any offenses he may have committed against the United States from January 20, 1969, through August 9, 1974.

In San Clemente, Calif., where Nixon has lived in seclusion and pondered what the future might hold since he left office Aug. 9, the former President immediately issued his response.

"One thing I can see clearly now is that I was wrong in not acting more decisively and more forthrightly in dealing with Watergate, particularly when it reached the stage of judicial proceedings and grew from a political scandal into a national tragedy," he said in part.

"No words can describe the depths of my regret and pain at the anguish my mistakes over Watergate have caused the nation and the presidency . . ."

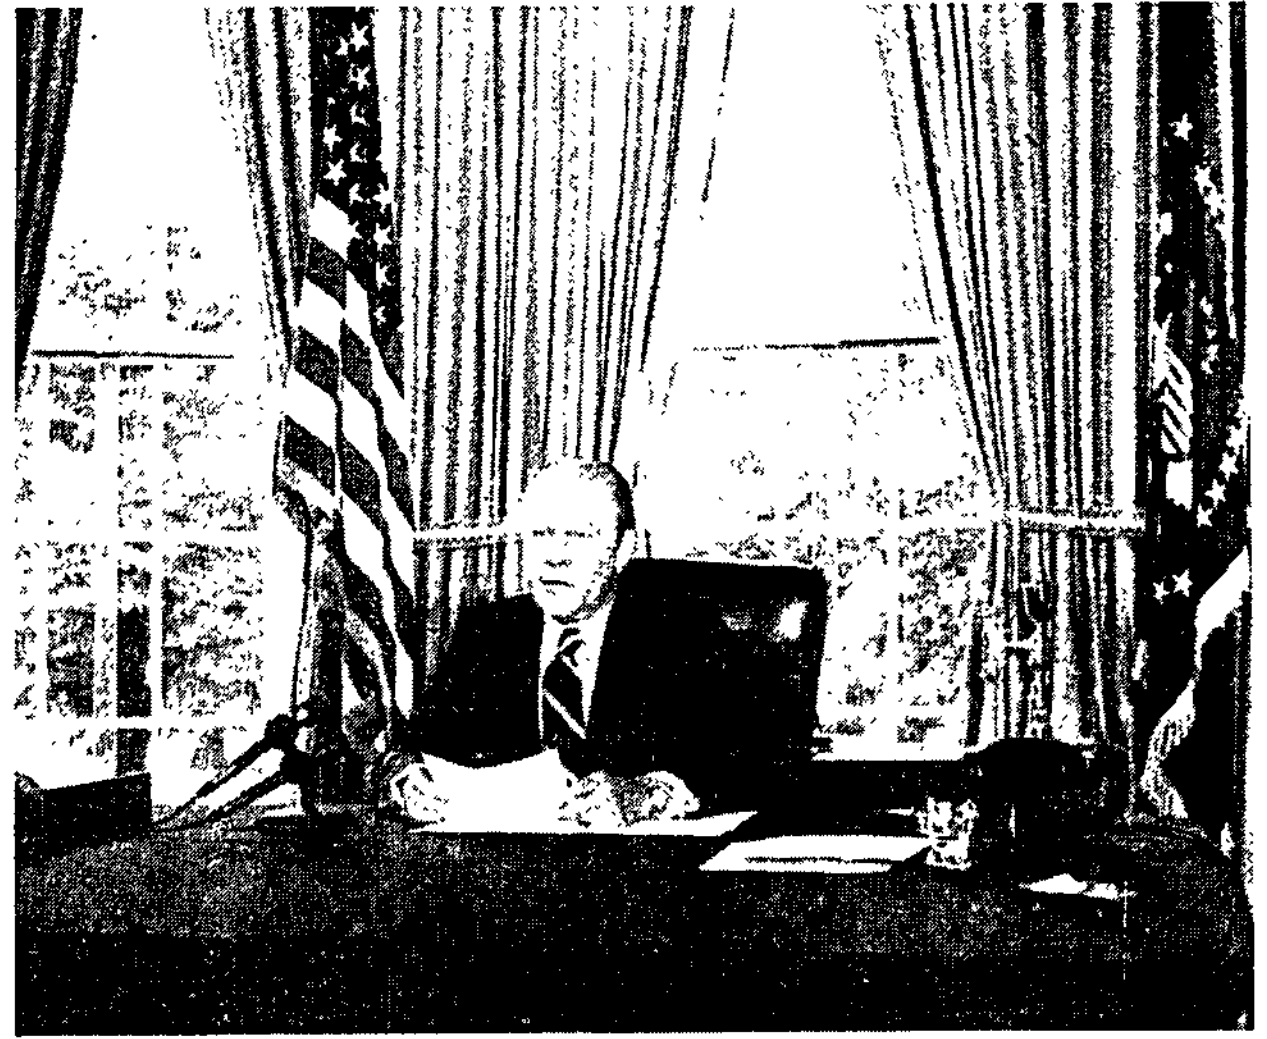

In Congress, reaction split down party lines and many legislators were simply unprepared to express an opinion in the early hours after the announcement.

Republicans like Sen. William R. Brock of Tennessee generally praised the act, reasoning, as Brock did, that Ford had "taken a tough road . . . there are times when you have to make decisions." One Republican, Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, said Ford had made "a serious mistake."

The harshest words came from Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., who called it "an outrageous act," and one of the President's closest Congressional associates, who declined to be identified for publication, said "Ford knows full well that by doing this he's blown up his honeymoon with Congress."

There were no strings attached to Ford's pardon and White House spokesman Philip Buchen said Ford had also decided, upon the recommendation of Attorney General William B. Saxbe, that Nixon's White House tapes and documents will remain his personal property and will be destroyed upon Nixon's death or on Sept. 1, 1984, whichever comes sooner.

Buchen said Nixon had agreed, however, to leave the materials in a federal depository in California for three years where they may be subpoenaed for legal processes.

PRESIDENT GERALD Ford reads statement that he has granted Richard Nixon a "full, free and absolute pardon" for all offenses the former President committed or may have committed while in office. Ford said yesterday that Nixon and his family had "suffered enough and will continue to suffer no matter what I do."

TerHorst quits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's Press Secretary J. F. TerHorst has resigned on grounds of "conscience" in connection with the pardon granted former President Nixon, a White House spokesman said Sunday night.

A TerHorst assistant, Tom DeCair, announced the resignation hours after Ford's surprising announcement in the morning that he was issuing a full pardon for any crimes Nixon may have committed while in office.

Tax relief for elderly bill signed

Gov. Daniel Walker Sunday signed six bills into law, including one which provides new tax relief for the state's elderly. Other measures were aimed at curbing collection agency abuses, providing funds for a Loop junior college, more money for the state's private colleges and universities, and two designed to make school buses safer to ride. The tax relief measure expands the state's "circuit breaker" grant program for the elderly and disabled. The program is designed to assist those on fixed incomes to pay property taxes on their homes.

Leftists to fight Peronist government

After months of cracks and strains, Argentina's Peronist movement has split wide open with the announcement by young leftists that they are going underground to fight the government they helped put in office. The government of Peron's widow and successor already faces urban and rural guerrilla activities by the People's Revolutionary Army, a Marxist group, and several smaller underground outfits.

French to buy own jet fighters

The French Air Force announced yesterday it will buy 40 of its own nation's Mirage F1 M53 jet fighters in what defense sources said was a move to beat the United States out of the "sale of the century" — a $3.5 billion contract for warplanes. The announcement coincided with a meeting of the defense ministers of Belgium, Holland, Denmark and Norway with French Defense Minister Jacques Soufflet.

Thieu seeks secret peace talks

President Nguyen Van Thieu has launched an attempt to open secret negotiations with the Communists in an effort to bring peace to Vietnam by the end of the year, diplomatic sources in Saigon report. Thieu also issued new orders to his top military commanders to adhere strictly to the cease-fire and to attack Communist troops only to retake lost territory, or when threatened directly.

Gear for Rockefeller confirmation

With no specific legislative proposals yet presented by the White House, Congress this week will turn its attention to making plans for Nelson A. Rockefeller's vice presidential confirmation hearings. A drive will also open on pending legislation in hopes of clearing the decks for an election recess in October. Hopes for avoiding a post-election session were dashed Saturday when Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield said Congress would stay in session all year in hopes of dealing with an anti-inflation package.

Ford maintains U.S.-China relations

President Ford apparently has succeeded in maintaining U.S.-Chinese relations on course despite the upheaval of President Nixon's resignation and the seemingly insoluble Taiwan problem. This assessment emerged from a series of interviews with administration officials and non-governmental trade promoters, and stands in contrast to private expressions of disappointment by Chinese Communist diplomats in the U.S., that relations have not improved faster.

Why fly Liberian flag? Money

Why do so many merchant ships fly the Liberian flag? The answer is simple. Money. A debate in the Senate last week showed it costs an American shipper considerably less to operate under the Liberian flag than to use a vessel registered in the United States. And in the cost difference lies one reason for vehement opposition to a Senate bill that would channel more oil tanker trade to U.S.-flag vessels.

Call pardon frightening, surprising

by BOB LAHEY

President Gerald Ford's pardon of former President Richard M. Nixon was greeted Sunday with "surprise," "regret" and "dismay" by Illinois Democrats.

Neither Republican congressmen Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, nor Sen. Charles H. Percy, who is traveling abroad, could be reached for comment.

Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Illinois, said he feared that the President's action would "confirm what I fear is already a widespread impression that there are two sets of laws — one for former presidents, vice presidents and attorneys general, another for everyone else."

Former congressman Abner Mikva, who is running against Young, said the presidential pardon, granted before any charges had been filed against Nixon, set a "frightening precedent."

Mrs. Betty Spence of Buffalo Grove, Crane's Democratic opponent said, "The judicial system has been aborted."

Mrs. Spence added, "We have no idea to what degree Nixon was involved in criminal acts. Now we will never know."

Mikva said he was "absolutely dismayed" that Ford, "a lawyer, a man who has been involved in our system of government for over 25 years," could "arbitrarily override the judicial system."

Said Stevenson, "No government dare encourage its citizens to decide for themselves what laws to obey and which to disobey . . . In our nation, the fair and equal application and protection of the law is as fundamental as survival itself."

STEVENS, N. Y. TIMES, 9/9/74, P. 1

Carmen fades rapidly; less damage than feared

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Hurricane Carmen, which slammed into the marshy Gulf Coast with 155 mile per hour winds and rain, was officially reduced to tropical storm status Sunday as it weakened rapidly and began to break up in its slow journey through Southwest Louisiana.

No deaths or serious injuries were reported from the storm that died quickly after hitting the Louisiana coast Saturday night. The greatest damage was to the sugar cane crop of which, officials said, as much as 20 per cent or $50 million might be lost.

The sparsely inhabited marshy lowlands took the brunt of the storm in Louisiana. Carmen had killed four persons in its trek from the Gulf and Caribbean before becoming the first hurricane to touch the United States this year.

Gov. Edwin Edwards toured the damaged area abandoned by 100,000 persons who fled the storm, and another 60,000 who found shelter in Red Cross centers in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

Meantime, another tropical depression was reported Sunday in the Atlantic about 525 miles east of Nassau, the Bahamas, with winds up to 40 miles an hour.

Japan and Britain also were hit with violent weather. Typhoon Shirley roared into southern Japan Sunday night with winds of 80 miles an hour, knocking down trees and tying up traffic, but there were no deaths reported. Britain was bracing for more rain and wind after a day-long storm Saturday with winds up to 100 miles an hour that flattened trees and crops, fouled shipping in the English Channel and left at least seven persons dead.

Economy a political trap?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democrats have set an election year trap baited with the inflation issue for President Ford and the Republicans.

By vowing to stay in session the rest of the year to handle any Ford economic proposals, the Senate Democrats have set up Ford and his party for a campaign assault no matter how he decides to handle the nation's economic ills.

If Ford does not take the Democrats up on their offer to produce fast economic recovery programs, he can be criticized during the October election campaigns. If he does offer long-range programs, the proposals themselves can be come a springboard for the political assault.

But Ford has already indicated that dramatic moves are unlikely.

Congress also seems set to defeat Ford's first substantive anti-inflation request, a three-month delay in a 5.5 per cent pay raise for federal employees.

Ford has also said he would send Congress a multi-billion dollar list of expenditures that he wants delayed or rescinded. But under the new Budget and Impoundment Control Act, Congress can block any Ford move in this direction and it is likely the list will contain many expenditures sacred to some legislators.

Arab youth group claims their bomb downed jet

ATHENS (UPI) — A Trans World Airlines jetliner trying for an emergency landing on the Greek island of Corfu with an engine in flames crashed into the Ionian Sea Sunday.

In Beirut, an underground group calling itself the Arab Nationalist Youth Organization for the Liberation of Palestine claimed responsibility for the crash. The group said one of its agents set off a bomb aboard the jet.

The plane, Flight 841 from Tel Aviv to New York, carried 88 persons — 79 passengers and a crew of nine. It had stopped in Athens and was scheduled to make another intermediate stop in Rome.

More than 10 hours after the crash both the airline and Greek authorities were unable to determine if there were any survivors. They said no bodies had been recovered.

A TWA spokesman said 34 of the passengers, including two infants, were en route to New York. He said the passengers also included a tour group of 13 Japanese who had changed planes in Tel Aviv en route to Rome.

TWA in Israel said the passengers included 17 Americans.

Greek Air Force planes dropped flares in the crash area near the small island of Paxos south of Corfu as rescue vessels converged on the scene.

NEWSMAP FROM United Press International says the TWA 841 jetliner crashed into the Ionian Sea yesterday. The plane, Flight 841, was en route to New York on a flight originating in Tel Aviv. It carried 77 passengers and a crew of 9.

More church, golf and travel for Ford

• Take away the amnesty-for-Nixon declaration, and it was another typical Sunday for President Ford. Up early, he attended a communion service at St. John's Episcopal Church near the White House — the church attended at least one time by every president since James Madison. Then, after meeting with newsmen in what was described as a spirit of mercy for the Nixon announcement, he donned slacks and a yellow sports shirt for a round of golf at Sports Tree Country Club. Today,

Evel's big jump fizzles, but he's healthy, wealthy

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Space-age stuntman Evel Knievel parachuted in his mini-rocket into the Snake River Canyon without serious injury Sunday in a futile — but lucrative — attempt to soar across the quarter-mile gorge.

Knievel, at least $6 million richer for his seconds-long flight, explained later that he himself triggered the chutes which lowered the rocket safely to the bottom of the 600-foot-deep canyon because the rocket had begun rolling over.

But the producer of the closed-circuit TV of the super-ballyhooed event said the chutes had been activated accidentally when Knievel's hand was jolted loose from the parachute trigger.

WHICHEVER WAY it happened, Knievel emerged from the dented "Skycycle X2" waving to the throngs that lined the rims of the treacherous, lava-walled canyon. He then was whisked by helicopter back to the launch site.

The blastoff came at 4:35 p.m. CDT. The red, white and blue rocket rose from the launch pad for 8.7 seconds. Then the drag parachute popped from the tail, pulling out the main chute. The rocket floated 600 feet to the rugged canyon floor alongside the swirling waters of the river.

"The shot almost knocked me out," Knievel said afterwards. The 34-year-old cyclist, whose flight made him the highest price daredevil in history, had trouble getting off his seat belt. "Thank God I didn't go into the river or I never would have made it," he said.

As the "Skycycle" bounced to a stop Knievel's head was straight up.

HAROLD CONRAD, chief publicist for the promoter, Top Rank, Inc., said the daredevil "suffered slight cuts."

The chutes were controlled by a "dead-man stick" which was capable of triggering the chute with the release of pressure. Knievel said he activated the chutes.

He said the designer "told me many times that, if I could ever see any opposite wall of the canyon instead of sky that would mean it was rolling and I should pull the chute and, thank God he taught me that. He saved my life."

He added that the rocket was rolling. BUT JOHN BRANKER, executive producer of the closed-circuit television operation, said, "The strain of the G's force of gravity under direct acceleration loosened his grip on the bar."

Branker also said he was with Knievel's blonde wife, Linda, and their three children at launch time. "She thought he was dead," he said. "We all thought he was dead."

He said there was minor bleeding from the stuntman's nose and eyes.

Knievel made his pre-launch arrival at the launch site in a helicopter. He alighted with his wife and children and walked hand-in-hand with his wife to the star-spangled "Skycycle X2," with their sons and daughter following.

Steam was spewing from the tail of the mini-rocket as crewmen scurried about making the final preparations for the blast-off.

SOME 30,000 spectators were massed on the south side of the 4,000-foot wide gorge in the desolate area, having paid $25 a ticket to watch the flight.

At 2:17 p.m. Knievel was placed in a chair dangling from a crane so he could be lifted into the cramped seat.

"I've never been afraid in my life of dying under any circumstances," he said in a pre-jump interview. "Rather than be the victim of a senseless tragedy, I'd rather be busted into the wind like a meteorite."

The cyclist's cousin, the Rev. Gary Sullivan of Carroll College in Helena, Mont., gave the benediction as the wind stirred up the barren land's dust.

"We all pray that he'll have a successful landing, whether that may be on earth or in heaven," Sullivan said.

ly clear something was wrong. The audience could not see whether he landed in the river or on the rocks.

The word from the screen was that Evel tried "desperately to get out before impact." A white-suited man was seen in a helicopter at the crash site. A cheer went up from the crowd and was suddenly stilled. It wasn't Evel.

FINALLY, A TINY figure on a rescue boat came into view. A white arm waved. The audience waited, not wanting to be fooled again. It was Evel and they cheered.

The popcorn was being munched again and they settled back to watch the slow-motion replays.

The T-shirt man in the lobby said: "Sure he gets a cut of these sales, we don't get in unless he does."

Park district wrapup

Policy prohibits part-time nepotism

The Wheeling Park District has established a new policy that will prohibit the hiring of relatives for part-time or seasonal work.

The district already has a rule against hiring relatives of the commissioners, but recently decided to extend this policy to all personnel. Board members said the hiring of relatives for part-time or seasonal help has never been a problem, but said the new policy would prevent any possibility of such conflicts.

For example, the policy would have affected only 16 persons working in a part-time or seasonal job this summer. Most were either brothers and sisters or husbands and wives who earned minimal salaries as pool attendants or supervisors of programs.

"In an effort to develop community awareness of park activities with as many families as possible that live within our boundaries, the Wheeling Park District will from this time forth hire only one member of a household," the policy states. "Household will be defined as father, mother, son, daughter or other person living within that one household."

Park Supt. David Phillips said a survey of 20 other area park districts showed that all allow the hiring of relatives for part-time or seasonal work. "Nobody else has set the policy that no relatives at all will be hired," he said, noting that Wheeling is apparently ahead of other park districts on this matter.

Pool roof to be repaired

Park board members have ordered the emergency repair of the roof at the Indoor Neptune's Pool to prevent possible damage to the new acoustical tile being installed on the pool's ceiling.

Park Supt. David Phillips said a leak in the four-year-old pool roof is more serious than expected and will require the replacement of the roof and some patching work. The park board waived competitive bidding and awarded the contract to Quality Roofing for $5,450.

The district is spending $6,500 to install acoustical tile in the pool, and commissioners said they did not want this work damaged by the leak.

New equipment purchase

The purchase of several new pieces of mechanical equipment was approved by the park board, including shelving, an air compressor and a steam cleaner.

Board members delayed action on the purchase of a 500-gallon gasoline tank, however, saying they wanted more than one bid on the item. Board members said if the gas tank is purchased, the district will have to keep a tight control on its usage to prevent employees and other people from using park gasoline.

In addition, the board voted to prohibit park employees from using the district's new maintenance garage for any repair work on their personal vehicles. They said that only in emergency cases could the garage equipment be used for repairs on anything except park vehicles.

It's really a honey of a problem

The Richard Jordan family uncovered a sticky situation — bees in the walls

by LINDA PUNCH

Winnie the Pooh would love the Richard Jordans.

The Des Plaines family, 143 Stratford Dr., recently uncovered a wall filled with honey while remodeling their home. The honeycomb — complete with bees — measured approximately six feet tall, three feet wide and one foot deep, Jordan said.

Although the family has lived in the house since 1970, Jordan said the bees caused no problems until a painter tried to paint the eaves of the roof.

"We noticed the bees before but nothing serious ever happened," he said. "There's never been any bees in the house and no one's ever been stung."

JORDAN DESCRIBES his encounter with the bees in battlefield terminology. He began by drilling a small hole in the wall and pouring poison in. "I put my ear to the wall and it sounded like World War III," he said. "The honeycomb was so thick, though, the poison didn't have any effect."

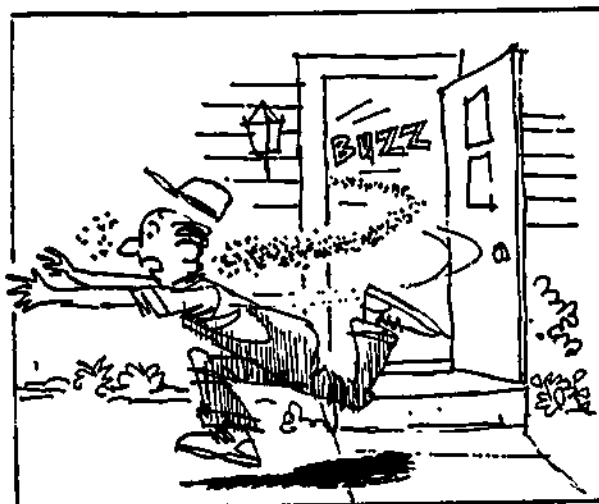

The Oakton Community College dean ran through a series of grocery store pesticides before calling in the reserves — an Oakton biology professor and a University of Illinois entomologist, Stanley Rachesky. Their solution: destroy the honeycomb.

Jordan brought in a carpenter to tear out the wall panels while his fellow professor stood nearby with "a powerful aerosol bomb."

"Everytime a bee came out, she zapped him in mid-air," Jordan said.

RACHESKY CONTRIBUTED a more potent pesticide and Jordan launched a second attack against the bees.

"It was like a circus — the bees just kept making noise," he said. "Nobody got stung — it was absolutely amazing."

When the wall board was torn out, Jordan said bees were "still there even though we must have killed a zillion."

"We stuck a chisel in the wall and honey ran down onto the floor. The really terrible thing is we destroyed all that honey with the pesticides," he said.

JORDAN SAID THE run-in with the bee colony unnerved him, especially since he saw the movie "The Hellstrom Chronicle" about insects taking over the world.

"The night before we mounted the final assault we could hear the bees buzzing behind the cardboard," he said. "It was just like Hitchcock movie — my wife kept checking the bedroom door to be sure it was closed."

"These bees are programmed to build perfect hexagons without shutting each other off. They've got to be as smart as all get out," he added.

Jordan received numerous suggestions from friends and family for getting rid of the unwanted bees. One college student suggested renting a bear.

"She said we should turn the bear loose in the house and he could take care of the bees and the honey," he said.

CLANAP IS THE major problem of the Jordans now that the bees are dead. The honeycomb and beeswax were carried out in shovelfuls, Jordan said, noting that his wife used to buy beeswax for her weaving projects.

"I noticed that she hasn't asked me to save her any," he added.

Removing honey from the hallway carpeting and woodwork was "messy," Jordan said, noting that "you can't use a wire brush — you almost have to use a spoon."

Despite the ripped-out walls and inconvenience, Jordan views the Battle of the Bees in good humor.

"There's something inherently funny about the situation," he said. "People just kept coming up with all sorts of outlandish jokes."

board monthly was rejected in a 2-to-2 vote. Comr. Lorraine Lark said the meetings would be useless. "There's no point in a monthly meeting unless we have something to review," she said.

Ross, however, created a three-man "pincer" group to stay in contact with both Passolt and Trustee William Hein about the basin improvements.

Noting village inaction on the improvements, the park board said that pressure on the sanitary district might be more fruitful.

ROGER BJORVIK, attorney for the park district, already has informed the commissioners that the district has grounds to sue the village and the MSD over problems connected with the basin.

He said the easement agreement signed in October 1969 states that the village "will construct, operate, maintain and enlarge the basin." In addition, the attorney said the agreement assures "safe and sanitary" conditions that will not interfere with the park district's use of the property for recreation.

Mrs. Lark said she was reluctant to resort to court action since the taxpayers would be forced to finance the court costs of all three parties involved. Board members, however, said they have not abandoned the idea of a suit if all other avenues are closed.

Passolt said Friday he did not understand why the park board members were dissatisfied with his letter. He said that he could not provide them with dates because he does not yet know what plans will be approved for the project. The manager said money for the improvements is not available but said he hopes the project will be finalized shortly.

Consulting firm interview slated

The Wheeling Village Board tonight will interview the consulting firm of Callaghan and Co., one of three companies being considered for a comprehensive review of village operations.

The review was proposed by Trustee Don Jackson as a result of the recent scandal when six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials were indicted by a federal grand jury for shakedowns of Wheeling developers. Four of the six have pleaded guilty and three have been sentenced to prison terms.

The board also is scheduled to consider an ordinance extending zoning for the North Suburban Library System's new headquarters on Dundee Road east of the post office. Zoning on the property had expired since construction did not begin within two years after passage of the zoning ordinance.

Appointments to the village commissions also are on the agenda.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Bakalis names Arlington woman to sex-bias unit

Judy Brady-Keller of Arlington Heights is part of a 24-member task force appointed by State Schools Supt. Michael Bakalis to study sex discrimination in Illinois schools and recommend steps for eliminating it.

Mrs. Keller, 1210 E. Burr Oak Dr., also heads the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Citizens Task Force on Education, a parent group concerned about sex discrimination in local schools.

The state-appointed task force has two immediate duties.

FIRST, THE COMMITTEE will study guidelines for implementing Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, which prohibits sex discrimination in schools. Based on its findings, the task force will provide input for Bakalis to use in making his recommendations on putting the guidelines into effect to the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

Secondly, the task force will make recommendations for textbook guidelines being prepared by Bakalis' office.

Mrs. Keller is one of three persons named to the task force to represent parents and concerned citizens. Others on the committee include State Sen. Esther Saperstein, D-Chicago; State Rep. Susan Catania, R-Chicago; and State Rep. Donald Deuster, R-Mundelein. Illinois teachers, administrators and students also are represented on the task force.

Locally, Mrs. Keller and other members of the Dist. 21 Citizens Task Force on Education last year conducted a survey of educational materials used in the district, which also serves portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

FOLLOWING THE SURVEY, the task force appealed to the school board to make every effort to get rid of materials they found to be sexually-biased.

In response, the school board adopted a policy to eliminate not only materials containing sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination as well.

Mrs. Keller said Friday she plans to continue work on the local task force besides the state committee. The group will be involved in teacher in-service workshops during the year and will serve on textbook selection committees.

Vacancy on park board to remain until April 1975

The vacancy created by the resignation of Wheeling Park Comr. Gene Sackett will remain unfilled until the next park election in April 1975.

Park board members voted not to appoint a new commissioner Thursday after noting that only one resident has applied for the post. Stan Mattson, 489 Bernice Ct., is the only resident to express interest in the vacant board seat.

Park Board Pres. Robert Ross said anyone appointed to the board would have to run for election in seven months. He said that since it would take some time for the park board to find applicants and conduct interviews, the new commissioner would serve only for four or five months before the election.

"It will be practically the first of November before we select him and that would leave four months," Ross said. "I personally would rather leave it open for seven months."

COMR. LORRAINE LARK said that by appointing a new commissioner the park board would only be giving that person an advantage in the upcoming election. "What it would do is give someone an edge in the next election," she said. "As an apolitical entity, I don't think we are here to improve someone else's position."

In addition, Ross said he did not think the board had any urgent business that would require a full five-member board. Noting that the board has already made most of the decisions on its 1972 referendum projects, Ross said, "All we have to do now is the clean up work."

Comr. Hugh Wilson said he believed that the seat should remain vacant because only one application had been received for the position. Other board members said that many residents may be interested in serving on the park board but not want to be appointed for such a short term. They encouraged people interested in the seat to attend future meetings.

COMR. FRANK Schnaltmann said that the board might find it valuable to provide a new commissioner with the few months experience. He said that when he was appointed last year it took him a long time to get acquainted with park district problems and operations.

Schnaltmann, however, agreed that the seat should remain vacant because of the poor community response.

The seat was vacated Aug. 30 when Sackett resigned to take a job in Paducah, Ky., with an office-supply firm. He was elected to a six-year term in 1969, which would have expired in April.

Mrs. Lark also asked that the attorney investigate the legality of 18-year-olds running for the park board seat in the upcoming election. She said that election of 18-year-olds might provide representation to a larger segment of the Wheeling community.

Mini-centers will help suburbs

Cook County residents will be better served as a result of the County Board's decision last week to approve a mini-civic-center in Maywood. The decision means that basic services will now be available in the suburbs, eliminating a trip downtown for many persons who need county services.

Last Monday the board voted to borrow money for construction of a ten-room courtroom-civic center in west suburban Maywood and a smaller but similar center in south suburban Markham.

The approval — which The Herald hopes will be followed in the future with plans to construct a similar center in or near the Northwest suburbs — follows years of talk about the concept.

Since the creation of Cook County, county services always have centered in Chicago's Loop, for the county's population has been centered in Chicago. However, the population is shifting to the suburbs, for in 1970 a total of 40 per cent of the county's population lived outside of Chicago — but were forced to travel to Chicago to obtain help or information from county government.

In past years, some county officials have sent mobile vans to the suburbs to aid suburbanites. There's also been the encouraging trend for some offices to branch into the suburbs to supply services.

However, the board's decision last Tuesday reflects a firm commitment to make available many more services. Of special concern is the need for expanded suburban court facilities, and the board's decision is a step in that direction.

The Republicans charge that this means a duplication of township government functions is an irrelevant charge, for county government at the very least provides services which township government cannot provide.

It's a political decision in an election year, but it is a sound decision. County government may not always be controlled by Democrats, but we'll always need decentralized services which characterize effective and efficient government.

For the sake of the Northwest suburbs, the plan should be expanded as soon as possible to provide a mini-center for us. In that way, county government's services will be more quickly available to all of us — and that is the way responsible government should function.

Kinsolving's views hit

I don't know what the denomination the Rev. Lester Kinsolving of your Religion Today column claims to represent, but his attitudes certainly aren't very Christian.

I am referring to his article of Aug. 23, in which he somehow contrived to find a parallel between the ordination of females and the ordination of women to the priesthood of the Episcopal church. Not only is he blatantly, sneeringly sexist in his description of the recent ordination of 11 female deacons, but he displays a certain amount of ignorance about the Episcopal church; for instance, he refers to the women priests as "priestesses" — a word which means something else entirely and is incorrect in this connection.

He talks at length about the fact that that three ordaining bishops were retired from their sees (which, incidentally, does not diminish their status as bishops in any way); he conveniently neglects to mention that they were assisted by Bishop Ramos of Costa Rica, a man who is about as far from retirement as one could be. He implies that the recently retired Presiding Bishop John Hines is "liberally way-out," a phrase which is as insulting to that moderate middle-of-the-roader as it is untrue.

The Rev. Mr. Kinsolving apparently doesn't feel that any of the women ordained may actually have felt a call to the ministry, since he refuses to ascribe any but the most cynical motives to the participants. The fact of the matter, however, is that the only irregularity in these ordinations was lack of permission from the other bishops — permission which would have been granted without difficulty had these well-qualified applicants been male!

letters to the editor

He refers to the ceremony as a "travesty." I think the word applies better to his column. Regardless of the "right" or "wrong" of the matter of the present ordinations, this sort of condescending sexist slop is an insult to my sex, my church, and all women who aspire to the ministry in any denomination. I would suggest that The Herald find somebody who is both less bigoted and more accurate to write their religion column.

'Follow bike rules'

I am a little concerned about children (and even adults) riding bikes. It is a part of growing to own and ride a bike, but there are also some rules and regulations that could go with it.

Maybe parents and teachers could set aside a little time to teach biking in a simple way?

I was born and raised in Sweden and have always enjoyed biking, but part of my joy was that I felt secure in knowing some rules and also, I knew that vehicles around me were aware of this.

How about starting with staying on the right side of the road or street all the time, except for turning when one can use left or right hand for a signal? Stop at stop signs and red lights and "go" on green. These simple rules that even pretty young children could learn (and adults) and streets and roads would become a more relaxed place both for bike riders and motor riders.

By the way, if you are an adult and know how to drive a car, you may use your knowledge when you ride a bike.

Who knows, maybe I'll buy a bike even in this community one of these days.

Tom Wellman's column

Trimming local salaries will aid inflation fight

"If we're serious about taming inflation in America, then the best way to begin would be to cut the salaries of top local government officials," The Herald editorialized on Aug. 19.

It was an editorial which would draw huzzahs from local taxpayers and a loud chorus of Bronx cheers from enraged school superintendents and village managers. After all, we reasoned, there's nothing that so enrages public figures than to write about their salaries. The meekest of them turn into roaring lions when their private pocketbooks are examined.

We figured wrong. We drew no Fencepost letters from enthusiastic citizens (but it was a slow month for letters anyway). More important, no irked public officials called or wrote to us about the editorial.

The lack of public response was not matched by the private irritation vented by our leaders. The grapevine told us of the editorial being slammed down and shouted at by several public officials.

But public officials know better than to stir up a public fuss. Rule Number One of bureaucratic survival is not to go public with your emotions or ideas, for your boss might be watching. Regardless of how intense your anger — or how creative your thinking — survival dictates avoidance of the public prints (most bureaucrats believe).

Let's rattle the cages again, and repeat the Aug. 19 premise, that if we're ever gonna control inflation, we're gonna have to curb spending in Buffalo Grove, Schaumburg and Mount Prospect, as well as in Washington, D.C.

There are two compelling reasons for the 10 per cent across-the-board cut right now:

- President Ford has ordered the reduction of government personnel in order to trim the federal budget to reduce inflation. That logic should be tried in the Northwest suburbs.

- School enrollment figures are dropping in many communities in our area. There's less and less justification in many school districts to keep too many overpaid administrators on salary.

Our wild-eyed proposal, however, should not be regarded as an attack on the quality of all administrators. There are many men and women whose creativity makes them excellent public servants. It's criminal that these persons aren't making more money than they are making right now.

But there are all too many drones around who shuffle papers for $25,000 a year. A 10 per cent pay cut could encourage some of these men and women to get out of public service and into manual labor, where their creativity could be better used.

It's argued that an across-the-board pay cut would drive the good people out of public service. Balderdash! Administrators have too long held that cudgel over the head of timid village boards and school boards. An across-the-board cut wouldn't force most of the valuable public servants into private industry; belittling has never pushed that many persons out of public service.

Critics of the plan contend that teachers also should be held to the 10 per cent slash. Perhaps that's a splendid idea because there are all too many teachers making $20,000 per year who haven't had a fresh idea since the creation of the one room school house.

But teachers as a group perform a much more valuable function than administrators. A radical might suggest doing away with all administrators, and let the teachers of our children survive on their own. Public education might be simplified and improved as a result.

Finally, it's argued that life in the suburbs dictates a minimum income of $20,000 a year. Yes, $20,000 certainly helps, but many administrators making such an income have a wife or husband also bringing home a paycheck. It seems that anything over $20,000 — especially over $30,000 — is more than enough to live in reasonable comfort here.

The end goal of this across-the-board idea is economic sanity. If all of us cut back on what we spend, prices should stabilize. That would be one of the end results of this plan to bring some of our excessively-paid public servants back down to a reasonable level.

'Painful, embarrassing' experience

by WARREN L. NELSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vietnam is becoming more remote in Pentagon thinking than the American Revolution.

It is a popular belief that the military always prepares to fight the last war. The U.S. military, however, wants to forget the last war. It is preparing the refight the last popular war — and that was in Europe.

The military has put Vietnam aside and embraced America's long standing NATO commitment with the same dedication and fervor it employed in the 1950s.

The war terms of the Kennedy era — counter-insurgency, unconventional war, the green berets — have left the Pentagon in the "burn bags" filled with the classified documents.

The turnaround started even before the war ended. Throughout the long years of "Vietnamization" then Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird was slowly trying to consign the war to the dustbin of history.

If asked a question about Vietnam, Laird was likely to brush it aside and counter with a talk on Europe. He would ask his audience to look at the really important area, the only part of the world where Soviet military might face the U.S. armed forces directly.

Vietnam is now just a little country, a long way away. It was a painful and embarrassing experience for the American military as well as for the American people. All would like to forget it.

Jerry W. Friedhelm, the principal spokesman for the Defense Department, was asked recently if Air America, a CIA-financed airline, was flying supplies to Vietnamese units in combat areas.

"I don't have any idea," Friedhelm said. "We're a little bit out of touch with Vietnam at this stage of history since we don't have anybody there other than those that work in the embassy."

That, of course, was considerable hyperbole since the services are still supplying Saigon with equipment and ammunition at the rate of $1 billion a year. But it did sum up the Pentagon's attitude.

Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger has continued Laird's European orientation and added a dash of nuclear weaponry. He expounds readily on missile accuracy and warheads, on nuclear strategy and concepts, on arms limitation philosophy and prospects. But Vietnam is a subject he generally touches only when he must defend the budget for aid to Saigon.

The European emphasis is by no means purely a cosmetic design to avert eyes from unpleasant and messy things. In the minds of most defense planners, Europe is the principal commitment. That is the area where U.S. interests are exposed far more than in Southeast Asian jungles.

Also, in order to fight in Vietnam, the U.S. forces in Europe had been degraded. Their equipment was taken from them; they were used as a dumping ground for men awaiting or completing tours in the war zone. Morale fell, readiness plummeted. There was a real need to focus attention and effort on rebuilding the forces there.

The Vietnam maps that once graced the walls of Pentagon offices in profusion — provincial boundary maps, population density maps, DMZ area maps, navigational maps — have been thinned considerably.

The one persistent reminder of the war is a little yellow ribbon with three red stripes — the Vietnam campaign decoration — that is worn on the chests of most servicemen. But even that is generally buried among the host of other awards.

Bakalis no rubber stamp for state, schools

by KATHERINE BOYCE

When State Schools Supt. Michael Bakalis was elected in 1970, educators throughout the state predicted a new era for Illinois schools.

One education advocate in the Illinois General Assembly likened him to the Kennedys and remembers him as "A breath of fresh air" four years ago.

Bakalis supporters still speak with pride when they recall how he dumped the political machine that had held the state's chief education office for years. Bakalis was a charismatic figure, an idealist.

BUT JUST AS political historians now are taking a critical look at President John F. Kennedy's accomplishments in office, educators in Illinois are assessing the work of Bakalis.

His term of office and the office itself will soon end as the newly created State Board of Education chooses the first appointed state school superintendent. The decision is expected in October. Bakalis is one of the contenders.

Some sources close to the state office of education have said Bakalis' chances of being appointed are slim simply because the new state board wants to make a clean sweep. The board is operating strictly apart from Bakalis' office to avoid any link to it in the public's mind.

But Bakalis has made changes in the state Office of Education that can be expected to remain whether he stays on or not. His predecessor, Ray Page, headed a staff of patronage workers whose main job was to process the paperwork involved in approving state aid and academic programs for local schools. Bakalis went several steps farther. He hired a new staff and began to ask local schools officials some pointed questions about the operation of local schools.

BAKALIS SAID he "shook some people up." School officials have been accustomed to a "very nonactive, nonvisual state education agency," he says. A common reaction to many of his ideas was "That's not what the state is supposed to do," Bakalis said.

As a result the people who were affected most — local school officials — have emerged as his vocal critics.

The change that soured them most was "Action Goals for the '70s," a document designed to reshape education in local schools and bring new life to their sometimes outdated ideas.

School people charge that Bakalis imposed on their local control of education by requiring them to follow new state goals. Bakalis' attempt to bring "accountability" to education by involving the community in forming the goals has been regarded as nothing more than a political ploy. Besides, Bakalis is a poor administrator, his critics say, pointing to poor communication between local schools and the state office as an example. His staff, they say, is young and inexperienced.

SOME OF THE most controversial goals include a statewide collective bargaining act for schools and statewide programs in consumer education, health education and environmental education. Each school also was asked to make use of individualized instruction as a teaching method, begin a prekindergarten program, and was asked to replace educational materials that are sexually biased. School boards were required to solicit the advice of the community, students and teachers in curriculum planning.

Some people who are a step removed from the control of local schools have applauded the changes made by Bakalis. Teacher Dan O'Brien, past president of the education association in High School Dist. 211, said many teachers feel Bakalis "has upgraded their profession." He said Bakalis understands the feelings of school officials. "I think boards are hesitant to be forced to do anything. Generally they want to do good things but they don't want to lose the power they gained when elected."

Whether the criticism of school board members and school administrators is founded may be determined by taking a look at what Bakalis has tried to achieve and how school officials view his accomplishments.

"Education has suffered from a lack of precision in its objectives," said Bakalis. He asks, "What makes a good school?" and answers, "Very few people have ever attempted to define it."

ONE OF THE attempts to set goals came through Bakalis' A-160 plan. Under this plan local schools were told to write goals for education and use information gathered from the community to set up these goals. Every public school in the state had to comply with the A-160 plan to qualify for state aid doled out through Bakalis' office.

Bakalis said he thought of the A-160 plan as the beginning of dialog in education between the schools and the community. But "some people thought it was an intrusion on their local prerogative" to run the schools as they saw fit.

Richard Schlott, Arlington Heights Dist. 25 board member, welcomed Bakalis' election in 1970. But, Schlott said, he became "skeptical" with the kinds of things Bakalis started off doing. "It looked awfully political."

The state "certainly should be trying to set standards for school districts" but shouldn't tell school people how to do their job, Schlott said.

For example, Schlott said individualized instruction has not been proved to be the best way to educate children, yet the state has accepted it as a goal.

COMPLIANCE WITH state goals shouldn't be a requirement for state aid, Schlott said, because "You tend to set standards because it's what they want, not what you want. It does tend to develop a lot of language — verbiage — that really doesn't say anything. It impresses the state and nobody else."

Two other goals that have been sore points with local educators require school boards to involve students and teachers in school operations. Students in Dist. 211 and teachers in Maine Township High School Dist. 207 have made repeated requests in the last few years to sit on the school board. All have been denied.

The action goals were "a good idea badly executed," said Schlott. Bakalis "tried to go through people instead of working with people. He got off on the wrong foot."

Bakalis evidently got off on the wrong foot with Supt. Richard Short of Dist. 207. It's inaccurate to say that goal-setting is a "whole new concept," said Short. "Good school systems had been using this approach for years." Short believes Dist. 207 has a good system and the mandate for goals from the state was more of an annoyance than an aid.

Each school system decided for itself how seriously it would regard the state mandate. Goal-setting for some schools meant "pulling out those old goals from the shelf and dusting them off," says Short, while other schools spent thousands of dollars for research.

BAKALIS SAID there was "tremendous opposition" to the A-160 plan and schools reacted in various ways. Some came out with "mediocre" plans, Bakalis said, and others made a serious attempt to poll community opinion of their schools and they came up with some "outstanding" plans.

"School officials get so upset by taxpayers and parents being involved," said State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights. "I think they should be out there encouraging it." And as for state mandated goals, "Sometimes if people don't do what they ought to do, you ought to make them do what they ought to do," said Mrs. Chapman, a former school board member.

Robert Beckwith, manager of the education department of the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce, thinks Bakalis' attempts to evaluate schools are one of his major accomplishments in office.

"We have seen a much greater awareness in the state office in encouraging the schools to look at themselves. I think that's desirable," Beckwith said. "We must, as a society, get a feeling of where our children are in education."

But Beckwith also thinks the goals shouldn't be forced on local schools. They should decide for themselves which goals are good for the community, he said. "Education can't be everything to all people."

SCHLOTT SEES the political impact of the hearings, too. Bakalis is "skilled at developing public relations-related projects. It angered me. I didn't see it in him when he was running for office. I didn't expect it."

Change is difficult to accomplish anywhere, to say nothing of a system as old, as complicated and as vast as a state school system. "Any bureaucratic organization tends to perpetuate itself and resist change," says Mr. Chapman. "You know who your friends and enemies are. You know what's expected of you. You have a lot to lose from change and you wonder what you have to gain."

What local school people think of Bakalis may affect whether he is selected as the first appointed state school superintendent and whether the changes he has initiated will be continued by the state board or be tossed aside.

WHATEVER THE decision, Bakalis probably won't be hurt politically. Sources in the Democratic party say his political future is bright. Bakalis scored a big victory in his election in 1970 and he has since been considered a golden asset to the party.

"I could see him running and winning for Congress," said Mrs. Chapman, who thinks a race between Bakalis and Sen. Charles Percy in 1976 would be "interesting." "I think Mike would make a beautiful congressman," she says.

Bakalis has proven himself to be "a vote getter," says Mrs. Chapman, and even if his is not appointed state superintendent he would remain "an excellent candidate for public office."

Suburb rocks to sound of 'Chicago'

by GENIE CAMPBELL

And they came. To B. Ginnings singles bar Chicago did. Whoever would have believed Woodfield Commons Shopping Center with a Turnstyle and Jewel Food Store on one end and Fayva Family Shoes on the other would host a rock group the caliber and style of Chicago right in the middle.

Yet that's the versatility of suburbia for you, and even more precisely, the growing village of Schaumburg that is already noted for erecting office complexes next to cow pastures. Why not now rock clubs then.

It would be silly to review Chicago's performance last Friday night. They were great. That's why they're on top.

THE AUDIENCE was in fact forewarned. Chicago's sound system is set up for auditorium concert engagements. . . 50,000 people at one crack. It didn't seem to make a difference. The music was not so overpowering it couldn't be enjoyed. Claps, whistles and howls attested to that.

Everyone crowded in along the edge of the aluminum dance floor separated from the main area by glass blocks. Young adults had paid their $9 a piece to be close, not to sit down.

There were a few chairs but they had been set up right on the dance floor for members of the press, relatives and personal friends of Chicago. You had to show a special pass to get down there. Of course it wasn't fair. But no one was about to give up their comfortable front row seats. . . not for Chicago anyhow.

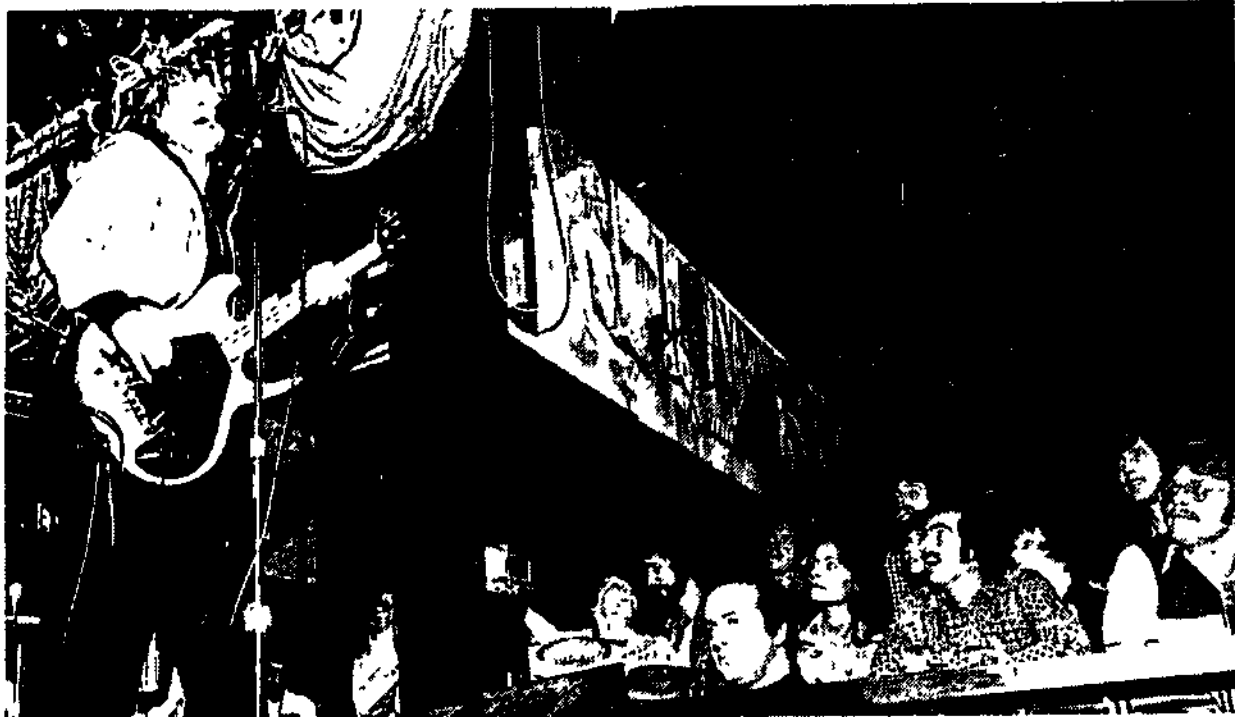

One barking man in his fifties, he might have been one member's father, walked right up and took a picture with his pocket camera. Ah shucks, the flash didn't work.

B. GINNINGS, named after a cut on one of Chicago's albums, has its built-in calling card, part-owner Danny Seraphine, who as drummer of the group, was parked in front center stage. What other new disco could top Chicago for a grand opening act or afford them either?

One thing for sure, Danny took in a nice night's profit for him and his two other partners, and left a lasting impression I'm sure, that will kindle further interest for B. Ginnings.

The nightclub supposedly holds 1,800 persons for concert engagements and of course both Friday night performances were sold out 24 hours after the tickets went on sale. Can anyone multiply? That's 1,800 times two times $9. And that's not bad for a club that's been open less than two weeks.

Seraphine got involved with B. Ginnings because he needed something to occupy his time now that Chicago isn't touring as much. He won't be spending much time here however, since his home remains in Encino, Calif.

AN EXCITED CROWD gathered at B Ginnings Friday to hear Chicago play a rare club performance. Peter Cetera, on stage, sang lead through the group's standards, doing so for the benefit of the audience and Danny Seraphine, Chicago's drummer, who also is part-owner of the club at Woodfield Commons Shopping Center.

Other name groups will be featured at the club including Rare Earth this Wednesday and Thursday. Otherwise, the club will operate as a bar with lounge acts, mostly local, being booked for entertainment and dancing. Mixed drinks are $1.25 which isn't bad compared to a lot of exclusive Chicago clubs. Also, you have to be 21 to enter.

I WAITED until most people had cleared out to see what B. Ginnings really looked like. It may have a suburban location, but inside the decor reeks of the city with a replica of the "L" tracks circling the ceiling and an Old Chicago Theater marquee designating the show area. One of the three bars is decorated like an old news stand and James Cagney and Jean Harlow posters decorate one wall.

It was felt by locating in Schaumburg suburbanites could be more easily served good entertainment. Chicagoans would come too with easy access to the tollways. Regardless who was there Friday, Chicago residents or their suburban neighbors, the place was packed. And that's all that Danny Seraphine really cares about. Wouldn't you?

MSD to let two lighted billboards stay on land

Metropolitan Sanitary District officials have decided to let two lighted billboards remain on land the MSD bought for a combined sewage reservoir in Elk Grove Township.

But the approval to lease property to the sign owner met slight opposition from Trustee Joanne Alter who wanted restrictions on the contents of the wording printed on the signs.

Mrs. Alter urged that political advertisements and liquor advertisements be banned on the signs, located south of the Northwest Tollway and west of Elmhurst Road.

But her suggestion met vehement opposition from MSD Vice Pres. Nicholas Melus, who said that while the owner had indicated he would avoid political signs, the MSD should not restrict the use of the billboards.

"I've never been in favor of censorship or book burning," Melus said.

The signs, owned by All-Sign Corp., will remain on the land for three years, until the MSD decides it needs the land to build the reservoir within that time period.

The owner will pay the sanitary district $5,256 annual rent for allowing the signs to remain on the property.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

American first--before gadgets

Oswald: "Gadgets are great help in World's championship slam bidding. But most of the time common sense bidding, plus a few simple conventions like Blackwood, will do the trick."

Jim: "I have a hand right here. I watched a very gadget-minded pair get to six after South opened with a weak two-bid. They were very proud of their method which involved an asking bid in hearts."

Oswald: "Asking bids were invented by Ely Culbertson in 1936 and abandoned by him in 1938. An asking bid is artificial and asks partner about his holding in a specific suit. It works beautifully every year or so."

Jim: "The bidding in the box shows standard American getting to the same spade slam. North opens in third seat; jump rebids in his suit; raises spades to four and leaves the rest to South."

Oswald: "It requires a little faith in partner for South to go on but he should. South has a perfect hand for Blackwood after North's very strong bidding and can bid the slam confidently after North shows three aces."

Aroused Lions slap down mighty Evanston

St. Viator gives touted visitor 12-6 grid lesson

by MIKE KLEIN

The quarterback was more accustomed to deep safety, the punter does his best swinging with a golf club and the corner-back had seen all his previous football from the spectator stands.

An odd combination, yes, but one which proved good football high schools in these northwest suburbs should not be regarded lightly by anyone . . . writers and opponents included.

Congratulations go to St. Viator's untouted Lions. They scored the win Friday night at Arlington, 12-6, over an Evanston club which has been rated Top Ten in most polls and No. 1 by some.

At the hub was Lion quarterback and team captain Bob Walsh, getting his first start after playing last year at deep safety. Walsh ran six yards for one score, then passed 19 yards to Jim Thompson for another as his club went ahead, 12-0, at halftime.

"I was just a little worried that he might lose his cool out there," said St. Viator coach Jim Lyno who tossed praise in all directions afterwards. "But it didn't happen so we're very pleased with his performance."

Walsh had an even bigger assignment after halftime, getting some time at safety, when Pat Rooney went out with a second quarter ankle injury.

Greg Kay, the senior punter, provided a 45-yard boot that put Evanston at its 18-yard line with just one minute remaining. It helped keep the Wildkats out of scoring range despite Dave Hoover's 36-yard pass to Fitz Fowler.

The important punt was Kay's longest of the night. Great for a young man who rarely attends grid practice because he's the top player in St. Viator's fall golf circuit.

"For a golfer, he's pretty good," joked Lyno. "If you saw our other punters, you'd take anything you could get. We don't have anybody else who kicks further than 20 yards."

And then there's Terry Frett, No. 3 in your program and last in the heart of Evanston coach Murney Lazler. The injury to Rooney, when he made a bruising tackle on John Ossyra moments before halftime, threw a kink into Viator's defensive backfield.

Rooney never returned. One change had Frett playing and he responded handsomely. Frett's key effort was a diving block of Hoover's pass attempt to Fowler when the Wildkats had third and five at Viator's 33 with about two minutes left.

Lyno discovered Frett on his spring track team and coaxed him onto the football field. "For a kid who's never played but is quick and agile, defensive back is the ideal spot," said Lyno. "Terry did the job."

Evanston's only score was a two-yard plunge by Brian Rosinski with 8:23 remaining. It culminated a five play drive that began at Viator's 24. Linebacker Jeff Jerome got the Wildkats going when he intercepted a Walsh pass and returned it 51 yards.

The Wildkats played power football on that drive, as they had in the first quarter when they took the opening kickoff and marched downfield to Viator's 18-yard line before stalling.

Evanston needed just one pass, Hoover to Fowler for 11 yards, on that game opening march. With Rosinski blocking, Jeff Brown tallied 27 yards in five carries.

But at the 18, defensive coach Wayne Fiedler's Lions gave no more yardage. Brown went for no gain before Hoover missed him with a rightside pass. Then Scott Zettek and Tom Ellsworth blitzed to catch Hoover for a seven-yard loss. His fourth down pass went incomplete.

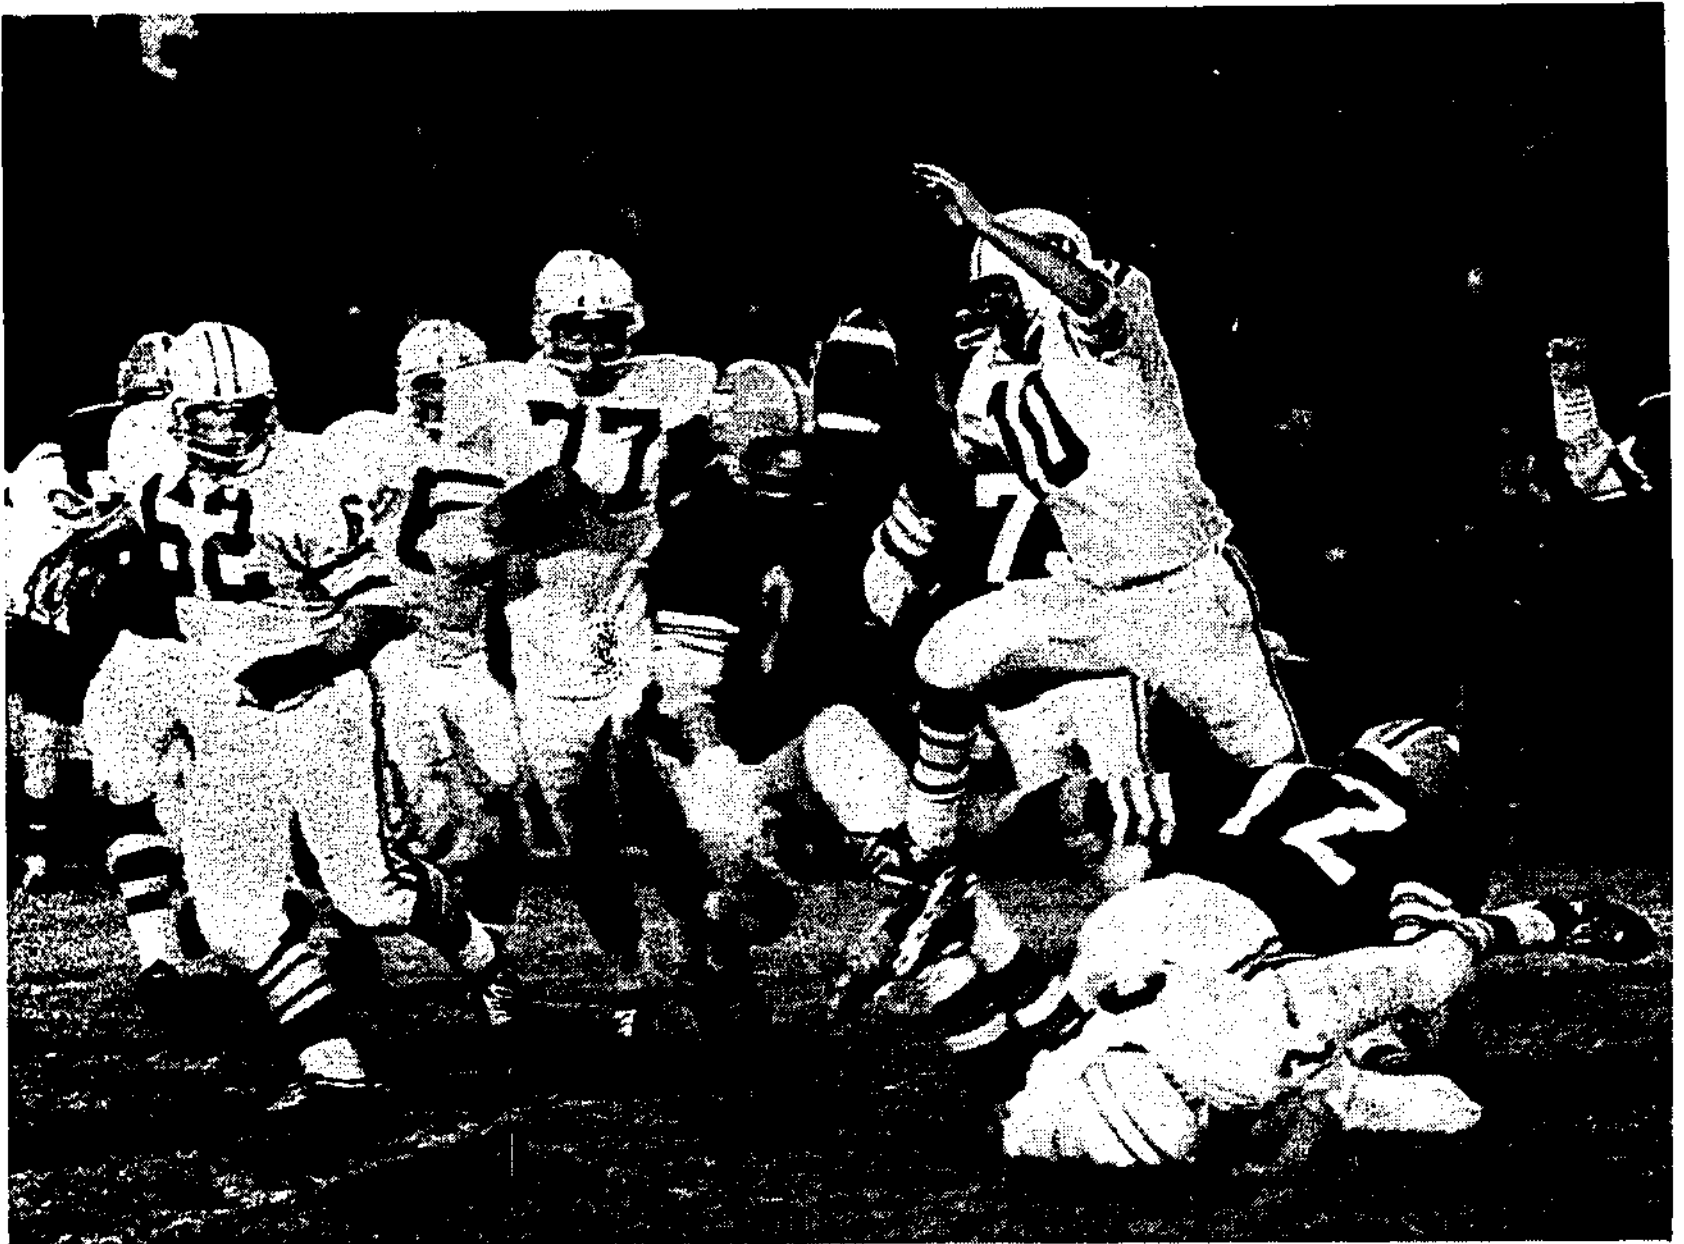

The Lions picked up two first downs before they needed a punt, Kay sending it 27 yards. On first down, Rosinski broke through right tackle and romped 85 yards to an apparent touchdown that was nullified by clipping.

It was a double break for the Lions because Evanston's Hoover then fumbled the ball away to Zettek who played a super game. St. Viator took control at the Wildkat 23. Walsh picked up six yards on a fourth and three. He bootlegged right and scored from six yards on the drive's seventh play.

Another mistake, Rosinski fumbling away Kay's punt as Vic LaMantia recovered, gave Viator a shot with one minute until halftime. Walsh ran for no gain before he swept right, then passed over the middle to Thompson, unattended in the end zone.

Viator was lucky to even get a chance at that second score. They started a drive on their 20 when Zettek held Evanston's Ossyra to one yard on fourth and two. Viator went two yards in two plays before Jerome tipped Walsh's pass HIGH HURDLING Steve Breitbeil avoids the shoe-string tackle effort by Hersey's Steve Johnson (72) and Ed Novak while the offensive support of rescue. Breitbeil and his Rolling Meadows mates were stymied by Hersey's defense, 24-6.

'Top' effort

Topczewski engineers Hersey's 24-6 win

by JIM COOK

Moments before the heralded opener between defending Mid-Suburban League champion Hersey and pre-season favorite Rolling Meadows, Huskie head coach Joe Gilwa shuttled yearling quarterback Scott Topczewski aside and laid it on the table.

"There's going to be a lot of people out there that are expecting another Mark Zakula," Gilwa said, referring to his graduated premier signalcaller.

"I think you can make those people forget him if you play your own game."

The scenario in the lockerroom 48 playing minutes later had most of the doubters asking "Mark who?"

Topczewski (pronounced top-CHESS-ki) began making his own assault of the record books with an artistic 24-6 masterpiece over the Mustangs.

"He gave us everything we asked for," Gilwa beamed in the middle of a mob scene near the showers. "His execution in the first half was excellent and he showed us poise, skill, confidence and leadership on the field."

The spindly 6-foot-1, 170-pound junior passed for two touchdowns to glue-fingered Bill Hare and manipulated Hersey's punishing ground attack for a whopping 221-yard display to quickly earn the respect of every team in the league.

"You can't help but be impressed after a performance like that," Meadows' head man Angelo Barro conceded in a dejected setting on the far side of the field.

His own touted field general Steve Breitbeil was involuntarily handcuffed to the bench after a free-for-all marred the close of the first half. Breitbeil and both Huskies Roger Urban and Ed Novak were ejected.

"We're not the same team without him in there," Barro admitted, "but I'm not making excuses. They beat us early while he was still in there. We just didn't come hungry enough."

Hersey did.

Its defense was impenetrable. They hit with all the viciousness of a wounded boar. And most importantly, they corralled Breitbeil — the hub of the Mustang offense — with a barbed-wire picket fence carrying a 12-volt charge.

The Hersey defense nearly had the game's first points on the board with only two and one-half minutes gone when Eric Strutz blocked Mustang Scott Green's first punt and recovered in the endzone. But an offside whistle nullified the glory.

Seven seconds later, defensive half-back Pete Fullerton picked off a Breitbeil bomb and turned the ball over to Topczewski.

The fluid righthander wasted less than a minute connecting with the streaking Hare who had smoke-screened the Mustang secondary for a 65-yard touchdown.

The first play of the second quarter had Hersey spectators squinting under the helmet of number 12 just to convince themselves that Zakula hadn't returned for one more game.

But it was indeed Topczewski who pulled the trigger on a perfectly-thrown bullseye to Hare from seven yards out and a 12-0 Hersey cushion.

With timbers cracking, the roof finally fell in on Meadows. On the Mustangs' ensuing possession, Breitbeil was staggered on a crisp crunch by Fullerton who forced a fumble. Strutz, Hersey's Johnny on the spot, scooped the pigskin and sauntered 35 yards with a score that stayed on the board.

Trailing 18-0, the Mustangs finally engineered an effective drive to the Hersey 15 only to have it end in catastrophe when the unscheduled boxing event interrupted play.

Meadows finally succeeded in touching off the scoreboard early in the fourth quarter when backup quarterback Tom Baugh threaded a perfect spiral to fleet Ken Barro for a 67-yard gem.

But Hersey's real estate tycoon Jeff Forster, who rambled 118 yards in 18 carries on the night, capped the scoring with an 11-yard sprint with 6:15 remaining.

"If we're a good team, we'll come back," Barro promised. "We are disappointed in our performance tonight, but maybe we learned something. We'll bounce back."

In the other corner, Gilwa was re-evaluating all the advantages of two separate platoons that allows each 11-man squad to catch a breather while the other takes to the field.

"Our game plan includes everything but two plays from what we used in the Super Bowl last November," he said.

In that case, Hersey's already hefty nine-game winning streak may reach infinity by season's end.

Elk Grove strikes fast, surprises Palatine, 26-6

by ART MUGALIAN

On another day, in another year, perhaps Elk Grove's 26-6 victory over Palatine Friday night wouldn't have been such a shocker.

The 1974 season-opener, played before a packed house on the Grenadier home field, must have reminded people of the Elk Grove teams of old — in the days when Don Schnake's Grens gobbled up big chunks of ground in quick thrusts and made quivering victims of their grid-iron foes.

Palatine's football machine, rated among the pre-season favorites in a strong North division of the Mid-Suburban League, fell too far behind much too soon against Elk Grove. Arv Herstedt's Pirates gave up three lightning-fast touchdowns in the first seven minutes of play and after that they never had a chance.

Schnake's Grens, on the other hand, had been tabbed to languish behind at least a couple other South Division entries this year, despite their three straight Super Bowl appearances.

But the Grens looked like championship material once again Friday on both offense and defense. They scored the first three times they got the ball, and they held Palatine to just 74 yards gained in the first half.

Elk Grove took a lead that never changed hands on the very first play from scrimmage when senior halfback John Willard broke off tackle to his left and scampered 63 yards for a touchdown. Glenn Stromberg's extra-point kick made it 7-0.

Willard was the offensive star of the game for the Grens, gaining 295 yards on the ground in 22 carries, including 184 in the first half. He tallied the third Elk Grove TD at 4:45 of the first period as he took a handoff from junior quarterback Tommy Allen and raced 32 yards for another score, outrunning Palatine's Mike Pircher to the goal line.

Notching the Grens' second six-pointer was Dave King, a 145-pound junior half-back. King, who gained 71 yards in six attempts for the night, hit paydirt the first time he lugged the ball from scrimmage on a 53-yard off-tackle slant.

Schnake praised his two running backs, both of whom starred for the Elk Grove track team last spring. He also had good words for fullback Tom Roberts who piled up 85 yards in six carries.

The Gren coach also lauded his front offensive line for supplying the daylight to his runners.

"They weren't fancy plays," said the coach. "There was no magic involved. Our line was ready and we got off the ball well on the snap. The halfbacks can run if we can get them out there."

Doug Antonik, Pete Gennuso, Tom Malinowski, Dave Horstmann, and Tim McGurie were out there trying to spring Willard, King, and company. They did a decent job.

But the Palatine defense toughened after the first quarter, allowing just five first downs until the final Elk Grove drive.

Then the Grens moved 79 yards in nine plays to kill the clock and put the last touchdown on the board. Reserve half-back Dan Mouinger scored from five yards out to cap the march, taking the handoff from replacement quarterback

Bison QB tosses 3 TDs to pace win over Cougars

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Wheaton Warrenton's first stop on the map for Grant Blaney's Buffalo Grove football team and the Bison will face that non-conference foe with an undefeated Mid-Suburban League record.

Beginning their first full season of varsity football, the Bison matched their record when you are defense with a strong offensive showing to contain the Cougars 22-12 Friday.

"We're really happy to have this one," Blaney remarked before boarding the bus with his exultant team. "It wasn't an artistic game and we need work in a lot of areas but we'll take a win any way we can get it."

Conant seemed the stronger entry as the game opened with the Cougars sticking mostly to the ground on a seven-play drive for the opening touchdown. Jim Stump got the score, breaking loose from the 12-yard line. The extra point kick missed.

Stump was the force behind the Cougar ground game in the first half, hauling the ball 15 times for 93 yards. Yet in the second half quarterback Bob Borczak called his number only occasionally and the senior running back finished the game with just 103 yards.

Borczak's neglect of Stump, and the running game to a certain extent, puzzled Blaney.

"Yeah, I was a little surprised they went away from the run," he remarked. "Maybe they were trying to get on the board too fast after they fell behind."

Buffalo Grove had jumped into the lead, 7-0, when quarterback Dave Smith threw a 12-yard touchdown pass to Rick Brinsmade. Brinsmade beat Borczak, who had the play well covered, with a diving catch for the touchdown.

The Cougars went back to Stump on the next series, a time consuming 14-play trek that came up dry at the Bison 33. Borczak brought his team as far as the 23 before a 10-yard loss and two incomplete passes stopped them.

"I was proud of the way our defense played," Blaney said. "They bent a little at times but held when they had to."

"We were ready when Conant was," Conant's defense looked ready to play as the second half got underway, smothering the Bison on the first series and giving the ball back to the offense in good field position. Borczak looked like he had gotten some suggestions on his play calling from head coach Ralph Lossee as he went to Stump four times for 12 yards.

But Borczak's third down pass attempt was incomplete. After a 10-yard loss the ball went back to the Bison, who won the game on the next series.

Smith's totals for the game weren't exceptional (7 of 16 passing for 74 yards), but this senior got results — three touchdown tosses. George Bastable caught three passes in the series that put the Bison ahead to stay.

The first was for nine yards, the second for 11 and the touchdown, the third for the two point conversion. Ben Orcutt, before the game an unknown quantity at running back, broke away for a 22-yard ramble during the drive.

"I think Orcutt ran with some authority," Blaney said. "Especially for a kid playing in his first varsity game. The Schuster brothers (Brian and Barry) and Arendall really played well, too. But they all had a lot of help. That offensive line was really opening some holes."

The Bison defense was providing the biggest headache for Lossee, who stood behind his quarterback's performance.

"You can't fault Borczak," Lossee said. "We felt from the beginning that we would be 50-50 running and passing. If you run all the time, then the defense brings its backs up and you're running against 11 people instead of six or seven."

Lossee continued. "We called the game the way we think it should have been called."

Prospect gives new coach win for his debut

by PAUL LOGAN

The man of the hour was so excited he had trouble locating the team bus. A football victory for a first-year head coach can sometimes fog his memory a bit.

Such was the case for Dave Keefe, Prospect High School's new leader of the Knights' football fortunes. Coming from perennial powerhouse Evanston to take over the head duties this year, Keefe was faced with something unheard of at the north shore school — a team which was winless (0-8) last year.

He took them to Palatine Friday night to tackle the Fremd Vikings in the season opener for both teams. He brought the Knights back (when he finally found the bus) to Mount Prospect several hours later as 14-8 winners.

"I have to give many of those (close games) at Evanston," he sighed after seating out the outcome. "Coming off that losing season, they played one heck of a football game."

"I have to give them credit," said Joe Samojedny, who was also making his head coaching debut for Fremd. "They hit us right in the throat."

"Their lines did a heck of a job. They turned the ball game around by controlling the line of scrimmage both ways."

Playing with the spirit of Knight teams of old, the Keefe-Influenced ("I'm a positive person") youngsters blasted open gaping holes offensively and closed off most of Fremd's openings defensively. The action was witnessed by a large crowd on a near perfect football evening.

Prospect took the lead for good early in the first quarter, putting Fremd in a catchup role the rest of the night. Starting at their own 39, a pair of runs by Keith Mason (8 yards) and Jack Devero (4) put the Knights in Viking territory at the 49.

Then occurred the "one big mistake on defense," said Samojedny, "and it cost us. We ran that play in practice all week."

Mike Quade, Prospect's quarterback, headed off left tackle. As he was being met by a Viking defender, he made what Keefe called "a helluva pitch" to trailing halfback Jack Devero. The 180-pounder caught the ball and "made a great run" down the left side of the field and into the end zone.

Fremd tackle Jerry Parker blocked the extra point, but the spirited Knights led 6-0 with 8:21 left in the first quarter.

Prospect maintained that edge until late in the third quarter with a rugged roadblock defense. Limiting Fremd runners to just 88 yards all night were guys like Bob Thorpe, Randy Clark, Scott Doney, Bill Novak, Dave Carlson, Scott Heatherington and Dan Meyer.

Mr. Meyer, only a junior, also proved to be the offensive star of the game. The 6-foot-1, 210-pound runningback carried the ball 24 times for 163 of his team's 278 rushing yards. However, he probably won't be expected to do that much work each game.

"It was just one of those things," explained his coach. "We do just what the defense says we can do. It gives us things and we take them."

The Knights found the middle of the Fremd line vulnerable and capitalized on it. All but five of their plays featured the run of their 284 total yards.

Utilizing the openings made by such lineman teammates as Tom Callard, Chris Peterson, Doney, Clark and Carlson (Does the latter trio sound familiar?), Meyer helped set up the clincher touchdown in the third quarter. He carried five times for 34 of the 59 yards on the drive which saw Devero go in for the second time, this scot from two yards out.

Quade's pitch back to Mason for the two-point conversion made it 14-0 with 2:08 left in the third period.

Mason finished with seven carries and 54 yards with Devero gaining 62 yards on just six tries. Both bettered Fremd's best runner — Rich Sharpe with 17 carries and 52 yards. But most of the night this big (6-2, 200) Viking was a marked man.

Fremd's only successful drive came in the last minutes of play. A pair of passes to Dan Robinson from quarterback Dave Wickum of 19 and nine yards along with a 15-yard face mask penalty set up the Vikings' only score. Wickum reached the end zone with a one-yard quarterback sneak. Jeff Overson made the point total eight after taking Wickum's pitch back.

With 1:10 remaining, Fremd's last chance — an onside kick — failed to work and Prospect ran out the clock.

"Even if we pulled the game out because of the onside kick, I still wouldn't have been pleased," said Samojedny. He was displeased with the lack of hitting ("If we hit, we can take care of ourselves"). The net result showed statistically — only six first downs to Prospect — 17 and a total yardage figure of just 121 yards.

But another new head coach was pleased. Keefe was also proud and humble, wishing to give equal credit to assistants Jerry Lovejoy, Bill Hansen, Larry Holman and Paul Fragalle.

Palatine's attack was stymied by a first-period injury to starting signalcaller Chris Burrus and then by a rash of fumbles.

Burrus was hurt on the third play of the Pirates' first series and he never recovered the game. His substitute, Mark McCoslin, played well, gaining 54 yards on 11 carries, mostly QB options. He also called fullback Jim Maycan's number 16 times and the big, 200-pound senior responded with 62 tough, hard-fought yards, including a two-yard touchdown plunge early in the third quarter.

When Maycan went over with still nearly nine minutes to play in the third period, things were looking up for Palatine. Ties on Elk Grove's next series, the Pirates got a break when a wild snap from center on a punting down gave Palatine the ball at the Gren 25.

But on the second play, the Pirates fumbled and Levee Montemayor recovered for Elk Grove. The Pirates lost the ball twice more inside the Grenadier 25-yard line, both times after precision passing by McCoslin had moved Palatine into scoring position. Covering the fumbles were Antonik and Chuck Piernarini.

"Those fumbles really killed them," said Schnake. "In the second half they were moving the ball on us pretty well — they just chewed us up. But our defense was opportunistic, shaking the ball loose."

Schnake was grateful for the early lead.

"I think we momentum," he said. "We got the momentum quickly before they knew what happened."

And before anybody else knew what happened, the Grens are back. Some estimates may have to be revised for 1974.

Saxons' stubborn defense sends Cardinals to defeat

by ART SHAUMBURG

Someone in the Schaumburg locker room had chalked up a huge zero on the blackboard following the Saxons' 17-0 victory over Arlington Saturday.

In the aftermath of Schaumburg's big opening win, the round, scrawled goose egg represented the first of several goals Saxons coach Bob Ferguson hopes his gridders will attain this season.

"Our goal defensively was to get the shutout," said the coach, "and we did that. Offensively, our goal was 30 points but we blew a couple chances and we didn't make it."

Ferguson emphasized defense as he surveyed his team's many football talents during a post-game discussion at Schaumburg.

"That's the strong point — our defense," the Saxon boss said.

The defenders, who count nine returning starters from 1973, limited Arlington to 124 yards gained and just 59 on the ground. They held all-league halfback speedster Craig Barnhardt to a scant 15 yards rushing.

The Saxon coach was pleased with the successful varsity debut of junior quarterback Russ Zonca, who forged a quick touchdown drive the first time Schaumburg had the ball.

"We'll polish him up a little bit," Zonca's coach said. "It'll take a few games for him to really come around. He still has to learn the pass patterns. He was throwing to secondary receivers when the primary receivers were wide open."

But Zonca didn't have to go to the air to get the Saxons on the scoreboard. It took just five plays from scrimmage, all on the ground, to spear the Cardinal defense. A 16-yard gain by fullback Tom Martino and a 15-yard burst by Don Clarke put the ball on the Card 35.

Then Zonca called for the option sweep left, pitching to halfback Scott Mielke. The 175-pound junior rambled almost untouched for the 35-yard score. Roger Biver's kick made it 7-0.

Cosch Chuck Halmers' Cardinals never got the offense moving. A trio of Arlington quarterbacks couldn't offset three fumbles, all in key situations, as Schaumburg's defense continually made the big plays.

Superb defensive work by Saxons Ken Jaffke, Jeff Boji, Bob Jones, Scott Scholz, Kevin Kristick, Martino and others forced six Arlington punts, including one which was blocked to set up Schaumburg's second touchdown.

It was a fumble recovery by Jaffke at the Cardinal 12 that led to a 24-yard field goal by Biver with just 1:14 remaining in the first half. The Saxons took a 10-0 lead into intermission.

Halmes switched signal callers late in the half, replacing John Yeazel with Mike Schell, who threw 12 times for four completions and 31 yards.

Yeazel was pulled in favor of Matt Shaughnessy in the final quarter. The third Card quarterback connected twice for 34 yards before he suffered a last-minute interception by Martino, closing off the best scoring opportunity Arlington had.

The blocked punt came early in the fourth period when Kristick, Scholz, Martino, and a couple others stormed in on punter Yeazel standing near his own 20. Scholz batted the ball and Martino scooped it up and ran to the six before he was stopped.

One play later, from the five, Zonca ran the keeper around right end for an easy six-pointer and Biver added the kick.

Shaughnessy rattled the Cardinals one final time, hitting Wayne Elnsen through the air for nine yards and coming back with a 25-yard aerial to Ben Hathaway. That put the ball on the Schaumburg 20, the deepest Arlington penetration of the day. But Ferguson reinstituted his starting defenders and Martino's interception saved the shutout.

The Saxon coach is anticipating Zonca's continued improvement next week at West Leyden in a nonconference game, and he also hopes to have sophomore running back Mike Christy in the lineup. Christy, out with a minor leg problem, also serves as the Saxons' first-string punter. He was joined on the injury list by 175-pound center Gary Bolger.

"You've got to remember that we had two offensive starters out with injuries," said "Fergie." "We had to polish up our act quickly since the injuries came just three days ago."

Next week, Ferguson will set the goals accordingly, but one thing is certain — if the target is a zero, the Saxons will give it a shot.

Can the best arm in the Big Ten stop Notre Dame, Ohio State and four other top-ranked opponents?

Order Northwestern tickets now and see for yourself!

Some coaches might call Northwestern's 1974 home schedule a nightmare. But for a fan, it's a pure delight! The top two ranked teams of 1973 — Notre Dame and Ohio State — play on Wildcat Tarn. Tuff this fall. Along with the always tough Boilermakers, and the Wisconsin Fighting Badgers, the Indiana Hoosiers and Michigan Wolverines were two of 1973's most trip roaring, with four touchdowns scored in the last 80 seconds of play. But Wildcat Coach John Pont is actually looking forward to the rugged 1974 season. Especially to the forward passes of Mitch Anderson, his All American quarterback candidate and two-time conference passing champ. His targets include two of the top seven receivers in the conference. And four strong, quick running backs will move the ball on the ground. With this wide-open offensive punch, the "Cats will be a threat to score any time, from anywhere."

So catch the team with something extra. An extra-special home schedule. An extra-special player in Mitch Anderson. And the extra excitement of big game picnics, dancing pom-pom girls, a 150-piece marching band, and a world-baton twirling champion!

St. Viator slaps down Evanston, 12-6

Into an apparent interception by Jerry Goldner.

But an Evanston penalty gave the ball back. Viator picked up one more first down, Walsh running 16 yards, before the Lions needed the punt from Kay that Roinski fumbled.

Defense dominated throughout this contest. Evanston picked up two yards total offense during the third period. And their only score was set up when Jerome stole Walsh's pass.

Evanston's Lazier stalked away infuriated. "Bad situation in all respects," he stammered. "We had all kinds of mistakes . . . dropped balls . . . too many receivers in the same zone . . . penalties hurt us. It was just a bad scene."

"Everybody keys for us and when they win, they think they're super," Lazier said. "We're not super. We know we're weak at tackle and it showed tonight. St. Viator outkicked us the first half. We made the mistakes; they didn't."

"We've got six letterman back. Well, you can see how No. 1 we are," he concluded.

Lazier blasted his offensive line but Lyne was much kinder. "They're pretty Forest View explodes in opener; rolls to 31-7 win over Wheeling

by KEITH REINHARD

On another day the monogram "FV" would be easily identifiable as Forest View but it came off with a different meaning Friday night.

It was Fred's Variety show, a four-act special that invaded Wheeling to lift the curtain on the 1974 prep football season. This FV brought on the dramatics early and made pretty much of a captive audience of the hosts, 31-7.

Under the direction of second-year coach Fred Lussow, the Falcons unleashed a diversified and talented cast on the Wildcats and could do little wrong themselves while capitalizing on a rash of mistakes by the homesteaders. The result was an impressive opener that even had the producer spinning a bit.

"To be honest, I wasn't sure myself just what to expect tonight," Lussow grinned. "I was hoping for the best but the kids came through way beyond my expectations."

Among those bringing a beam to Lussow's face were:

Jim Petran, his junior southpaw signal caller who zeroed in on over half of his 13 pass attempts including a 66 yarder for touchdown No. 2 after going over himself to put the guests on the board.

Running backs Dave Matz and Joe Difatta, averaging five yards a carry while keeping the Falcon ground game in high gear most of the evening.

Backs Dave Ennes and Mike Cupal, who also got into the scoring act. Versatile senior Neil Schmidt qualified as well, as the recipient of Petran's bomb.

Greg Jacobs, a soccer style kicker who was letter perfect on four conversion attempts and added a tough-angle 22-yard field goal to the cause to boot.

The list went on and on, through a stingy defense headed up by noseman Tom Delyn to the specialty teams keyed by players like Steve Coskey, who appeared to make the tackle on every View kickoff play.

Even losing 'cat coach Jack Liljeberg granted the opposition their due. "We made an awful lot of mistakes tonight but it was to Forest View's credit that they were prepared to take advantage of them."

And Liljeberg refused to get down on the Wildcats, who have now absorbed 17 straight conference defeats in succession. "We got off on the wrong foot tonight but the kids didn't quit, even after the result was pretty much inevitable. I was disappointed, of course, but we're going to get better. I'm confident of that."

Forest View scored seven plays into the game, six after kicking off to the hosts. A 'Cat fumble put them in command on the Wheeling seven and Petran dove across from the one with 8:33 still showing on the clock.

Both defenses dug in after that through the rest of the first period, but Wheeling bobbled away possession again to open the second stanza. Petran quickly connected on a couple of 13-yard flings and then floated one 40 yards into the outstretched arms of Schmidt to double the score.

Just before halftime the Falcons were threatening again. A 'Cat goal line stand featured a no-gain tackle by Scott Jones and Mike Brzuskiewicz at the one-foot line with 18 seconds to go and a deflected pass later Jacobs toed one over diagonally from the 12-yard line to give Forest View a 17-0 intermission lead.

The third quarter was all Falcon. They sandwiched 41 yards on the march around a 22-yard punt that was fumbled back to them and Cupal finally went over from the one on fourth down after another valiant Wheeling goal-line stand.

The next time the guests had the ball a costly pass interference call abetted a 65-yard drive that Ennes climaxed by slanting off right guard from two yards out.

Trailing then 31-0, the Wildcats managed to rally after Jones intercepted a Petran spiral. Bill Larson moved the ball on the ground for one first down and Glenn Barry capped the charge with a 10-yard pass connection to Al Newman.

Dominating the game for the losers was two-way lineman Brzuskiewicz, who in addition to tackling, maintained a healthy 38-yard punt average topped off by a 54-yard boomer near game's end.

Harper opens on bright note with 21-0 victory

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

MILWAUKEE — Gary Mueller, the starting quarterback for Harper College and emergency replacement at center during punts and field goal attempts, displayed a facility for throwing passes both upright and on his head while leading the Hawks to a 21-0 opening game victory over Concordia College here Saturday.

Pressed into service the Thursday before the game, after the disqualification of the regular snapper, Mueller worked for two days with kicker Dave Patterson. His performance was all the more remarkable for never having done it before.

"We figured the center snap was just a forward pass thrown while standing on your head," explained Harper head coach John Eliasik. "Some of the snaps weren't real sharp or have a lot on them but they were all within easy catching range."

They were all good enough to give Patterson time to repeatedly clear the ball out of trouble with punts that sometimes traveled as far as 75 yards.

But if Mueller was only adequate passing backwards then when he got to throw forward he was spectacular. Teaming up with his receivers, including Irvin Kimbrough and Frank Bavaro who each caught five passes, Mueller sliced up the Concordia defensive backs for 256 yards and two touchdowns. He completed 13 of the 17 passes he attempted.

"Concordia played an eight man front," Eliasik explained, "which forced us to pass. That put just three men in the secondary and they were left with man to man coverage."

Kimbrough, for one, proved that man to man defense isn't the best of ideas against him. The first time Mueller throw to him Kimbrough got behind his coverage, grabbed the pass and gangstered 80 yards for the Hawks first touchdown.

"Kimbrough is like a professional athlete," assistant coach John Strell said. "He'll take it easy up to the line of scrimmage, then explode. He stops hustling when the play is over."

After catching the ball Kimbrough often looks to see how the defenders are reacting, sometimes letting them hit him to remove them from the play. Rolling with the punches he will then shake free and turn on the speed that gained him junior college All-American recognition last season.

The eight man front line which Concordia played, while giving up quite a bit of yardage in passing, effectively stymied the Hawk ground game.

"That's where we'll have to work hardest this week," Eliasik said. "Our offensive line is paper thin and the running game wasn't tuned well. We could use a half dozen linemen.

"I think a lot of our problems with the running game would be solved if we could get in more contact work during practice," Eliasik continued. "We're so thin we can't take the chance of having somebody injured."

Marty Williams and Mike Dean carried 19 times between them and combined for all but 10 of the Hawks' 92 rushing yards. Williams, though, often jumped the gun in the backfield and drew numerous illegal procedure penalties.

The second Hawk touchdown came in the third quarter on a 16 yard pass from Mueller to Bavaro. Alternating at tight end with Mike Mudi, both carrying plays to Mueller, Bavaro was a steady, reliable receiver.

"Bavaro was catching the ball well," Eliasik said. "He's a good athlete."

Strell added, "He will be a good prospect for somebody. Bavaro likes to hit and could make a good linebacker. He just keeps going."

The Harper defense provided the final touchdown through a 75 yard return on an interception by Mike Amundsen. Except for that one brief flare the defense was better noted for its consistency. Except for one frenzied goal line stand the Concordia attack penetrated no deeper

Bears' analyst promises to always 'tell it like it is'

Good morning.
First, let me introduce myself.
My name is...

No, why spoil a good thing? Let's just call me 'The Masked Bear' for this football season because I'm going to spend my Sunday afternoons evaluating the Chicago Bears and, frankly, I just might arouse the ire of some 200-pounder.

Who was it that said discretion is the better part of valor, or something like that? I'm not dumb. I'll wear a mask.

No, I'm not an ex-player for the Bears. There are thousands of ex-Bears running around who would like to take a few raps at Papa Bear and his organization, but I'm not one of them. Ex-player, no. Take a few raps, yes.

My main objective will be to look at the Bears each Sunday through the eyes of the long-suffering fan, the guy who is sick and tired of watching a once-proud National Football League franchise stumble around with more problems than an expansion team.

You may not agree with what I have to say, but I promise credit where credit is due and knocks where knocks are due.

If you're reading this, you're probably a fan who has a few things to say about the Bears. That's what I'm here for. I want to be a spokesman for the fans, the people who pay good money and want to see a good product again from this city in the National Football League.

It's time the fan speaks up. Sure, we can listen to a Bill George as an analyst on television, but just how objective can this once-great linebacker be? He owes a lot to Papa Bear, and he's not going to knock the organization. Mike Pyle, another analyst, is a little more objective, but he also owes a lot to the Bears' organization.

I see where Coach Abe Gbron has been telling the writers, in so many words, to get off his back and write something positive for a change. Come on, Abe, give 'em something positive to write about.

After you beat Baltimore, you came out with a "See, I told you so" speech. Then you got smashed by hapless Houston. Okay, so you played a fairly decent first half Saturday night against an admittedly lethargic Miami team, but you still lost 30-7. And what did that first half prove anyway?

Remember, last year? You tied Miami 9-9 and grandly predicted the Bears could play with anybody. You won three of 14 in the regular season.

Why, Abe, do you keep asking for positive thoughts?

What have you done for the fan lately? This is a big-money business, and professionally shouldn't be treated like high school kids anyway. If they don't do their job, they should get rapped. If they do their job well, they should be praised.

I always get a kick out of the professional athlete who gets uptight when something negative is written or said about his performance. What do they expect? Should they be coddled just because they're professional athletes? Non-sense.

What do I honestly expect from the Chicago Bears in 1974?

I could be real flip and predict an 8-14 season. But I'm really not that bad a guy. There just has to be a win or two or three (now, I'm really getting heady) along the road to the Dec. 15 finale with Washington.

This harsh prediction of a few wins actually comes from the heart. I want the Bears to win. I want Chicago to win. I look down that schedule and see several games they actually could win. Believe it or not.

What's so great about Detroit? Or the Jets? Or New Orleans? Or even Green Bay? Or the Giants? Or San Diego? Or San Francisco.

Lauesen dazzles; East races to 37-6 triumph

by CRAIG ROWELLS

The Maine East Booster's Club designated the first game of the 1974 Blue Demon schedule Family Night; Lauesen Night would have done just as well.

Senior Mike Lauesen had quite a night in leading the Blue Demons to a season opening 37-6 victory over St. Anne's of Kankakee.

Showing his worthiness as co-captain, Lauesen accumulated a total of 240 offensive yards, scored four touchdowns, one two point conversion and ended the game with 26 points.

Some of Lauesen's brilliance should be credited to the Blue Demon offensive line. Two hundred twenty-two yards of Lauesen's 240 total were gained on the ground with a majority of that yardage made in between right and left tackle.

Saying the Blue Demons were right or left handed wouldn't suffice. "We just down-blocked one way, huddled up, and came right back with a down-block to the other side," is how Maine East head coach Al Eck described his team's effectiveness.

Aside from Lauesen and the offensive superiority of the Blue Demons, the game wasn't as one sided as the 37-6 score indicated; at least the first half wasn't.

Of course, I looked at their schedule last year and said, "What's so great about the Saints, or the Falcons, or the Patriots. They lost them all. What's pathetic about the Bears is that the only way they seem to win games or even score lately, is with a trick play, not sound fundamental football. They still love their fights, and they remain the NFL leader in the ridiculous penalty. Nothing ever seems to change.

It's embarrassing to be a Bears fan. People stop you on the street and shake their heads in bewilderment.

"You STILL follow the Bears?" they ask. "Are you a masochist?"

I usually counter with, "Well, don't you remember the time we beat Washington 73-0?"

Okay, this year I'm going to be honest in this column. I'm going to tell it like it is. Sorry, Howard.

You people out there probably think it's a glamorous job to get to write a column each Sunday. Let's face it. There must be better things to do on your Sunday afternoons than watch the Bears play football, and then comment on it.

I could always cut the grass or rake the leaves. Or move to Miami.

See you next Monday — after the Detroit game.

Let's see now. Was that in 1940 or '41 when the Bears beat Washington 73-0?

In Chicago, what else? Another 'big game' loss

Good whiskey does not ferment overnight. Just ask anyone down at The Whistle & Cheer where they don't even serve the stuff. You drink the only brew available or get out.

And some time will pass before Jim Spavital comes to understand how Chicago sports teams manage to irritate their fans, alienate the working media and embarrass themselves on television.

But Spavital is learning, you can bet on that. And I'll be here every Monday morning to help him with the lessons in my weekly column.

Saturday night in Birmingham, Hurricane Carmen's northern waters and 54,000 delirious, insanely soaked fans sat in shocked amazement as their beloved Americans teetered near defeat to Spavital's Chicago Fire.

Telly viewers in these parts probably switched channels after Birmingham surged into a 38-19 advantage midway through the third quarter. There seemed little reason to stick around.

Even those who surged onward heard very little football from the Cutesy Kids — Vince Lloyd and Bill Berg. (Note to viewers: Turn down the television; turn up Eddie Doucette and Mike Pyle on FM radio.)

Trampled but not emasculated... the Fire rekindled itself when Virg Carter, the computer printout quarterback, finally got the blocking he deserved. Sacked six times, Carter rifled touchdown passes to Mark Kellar, James Scott and Jim Seymour.

That put the Fire on top, 40-38, gave Carter five TD aeriels, three to Scott for three, 28 and six yards, and left all us folks down at The Whistle & Cheer chortling for another round.

But, of course, we lost, 41-40. In Chicago, what else?

They call 'em extra points in the NFL where my drinking buddy, The Masked Bear, will seek... but not find... many reasons to rejoice this fall.

We like the term 'action point.' For Chicago, however, it's been a stale play. Carter threw incomplete action point passes to Jack Dolbin twice and Scott once during the second half.

The half ended at 14-6 with St. Anne still in the game.

With 11 seconds remaining in the first half, St. Anne's defense, lead by Nathaniel Russell, broke up an attempted middle-screen pass and dumped Blue Demon quarterback Sam Carter for a 10 yard loss. Carter had to be helped from the field, leaving the Demons in search of a quarterback for the second half.

The second half started with Doug Cerny taking over for Carter at quarterback. Cerny didn't have to worry because he wasn't alone.

Demon Jack Meyer intercepted St. Anne's third play of the second half giving the Demons good field position on St. Anne's 47 with 10 minutes remaining. Five minutes later and after a fumble on the goal line at about 8:30, a play which spoiled many other Demon drives, Lauesen took a Cerny handoff and made the score 20-6, Demons' favor.

The remainder of the game was dominated by Maine East both offensively and defensively. The Demons ended the game with 200 more total yards than St. Anne's and 31 more points.

SCORE BY QUARTERS
St. Anne 0 0 0 6
Maine East 7 16 7-37

Give me just one conversion and we're into overtime... give me another and Birmingham has lost a football game. Of course, this is programmed behavior. The Fire owns 38 touchdowns but just 11 action points. At first glance, it must rank as their sorriest statistic.

Then you discover another category... Kickoff returns. Too bad nobody told Allen Watson about Chicago Fire specialty teams. He might have elected to stay with the Youngstown (Ohio) Hardhats.

Sidewinder Watson teed up for six kickoffs Saturday and here's the full tally:
1) Charles Reamon returns the ball 64 yards to Chicago's 24. Result: Art Cantrelle scores from one yard. Birmingham 8, Chicago 0. (Note the action point.)

2) Now we try the short kick. Linebacker Ronald Fox fields pigskin at his 35. But a Chicago personal foul gives Birmingham possession at our 37. Result: Charlie Haraway scores from one yard and the Americans lead, 16-8. (Note the action point.)

3) Long kick again and Reamon goes 69 yards to Chicago's 12. It takes George Mira one play to find Dennis Homan for a 23-16 halftime lead.

(Berg, smaller half of the Cutesy Kids, interviews Fire owner Tom Orger during intermission. Visibly upset, Orger says, "It's kind of scary to score because then we've got to kickoff again.")

4) Not to be outdone, Jimmie Edwards shows Reamon how by tromping 81 yards to the Chicago four where Hal Phillips is hurt making the tackle. Result: Cantrelle sweeps left for his third touchdown. Birmingham leads, 38-19. (Note the action point.)

5) Chicago has rallied to a 38-26 deficit. Watson's onside boot travels eight yards sideways and two forwards. After the procedure penalty, Reamon scampers 44 yards to Chicago's 44. Result: The second of Earl Sark's three punts.

Carter's pinpoint passing to Scott (29 yards) and Seymour (38 for the TD) put Chicago ahead 40-38, inside four minutes. Spavital's important decision: Kick short or long?

6) Watson went short, again to Fox, who made the retrieval and surged ahead nine yards where Tommy Roussel was hurt making an excellent tackle.

Kicking errors and blown action points lost this game. Birmingham's six kickoff returns totalled nearly 280 yards, ex-

What to do to combat 'cluster,' migraine headaches

Would you give me your views on "histamine cephalgia," perhaps better known as "Horton's Syndrome?" Over a seven-year period I have been to countless doctors and received as many different type treatments.

I am seized by this condition for six weeks at a time. The headaches usually last for 15 to 20 minutes and are very excruciating. Sleep precipitates them about half the time. The pain is always on the right side of my head from behind my eye to the back of my neck. The condition will not tolerate alcohol in any form. Every doctor I have visited had no idea of the cause or the treatment for this problem.

Three years ago I did see an allergist who was familiar with the ailment. He gave me histamine injections, and the treatment made it possible to have a two-year vacation from these headaches. Now I am in one of the six-week seizure periods. Do you have any explanation for this condition and are you aware of any other treatment or cure?

These headaches are pretty much as you have described them. Often they affect the nose and cause a lot of watering from the nose and eye. They can affect either the right or left side of the head at different times in the same patient. Alcohol is known to make the condition worse during episodes of these attacks. In between the clusters of attacks it has no effect.

Note the term "cluster." These are often called cluster headaches because the attacks come in clusters for a few weeks and then may not recur for months or even years. This characteristic of them makes it very difficult for the doctor or the patient to evaluate various treatments. You could have a sudden, spontaneous, free period. It's just possible that this was the reason for your two-year vacation from headaches rather than the histamine injections. No one knows under these circumstances.

THESE HEADACHES are considered by most authorities today as a variation of "migraine headaches." And the treatment is essentially the same as that used for migraines. This sometimes leaves something to be desired. The approach to these headaches has changed as they have become better understood. As you know, they have been described only a few years ago, and an experience factor has been necessary for better understanding.

A number of medicines are now used to treat and to prevent these problems. The idea of histamine injections has fallen by the wayside. Only a few think they really help and most neurologists think there are better medicines now. One of these to prevent attacks is Inderal (propranolol).

Just as in typical migraine headaches, the person's life style and situations need to be explored. People with migraine headaches tend to be over-achievers and literally drive themselves emotionally and intellectually to the point that the headache occurs. Sometimes learning to understand one's own emotional dynamics and being able to do something about them helps a great deal in people with migraine and also cluster headaches.

This 'n' that13% increase seen in Harper enrollment

Fall enrollment at Harper College is expected to be 13 per cent higher than last fall.

College officials said last week that when enrollment in the college's credit and noncredit programs is completed, they expect more than 15,000 full and part-time students compared to 13,255 last year.

About 10,000 of the students will be registered for credit, while 5,000 will be in noncredit continuing education programs. Most of the increase in enrollment in credit courses is taken up by part-time students, college officials said.

Late registration for classes ended at the college Friday, while registration for continuing education classes will continue for the rest of the semester.

To speak on retardation

Dr. Robert Mendelsohn, pediatrician at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago and advocate of programs for the mentally retarded, will speak Tuesday at the Kirk Center in Palatine.

Addressing the Suburban Townships Assn. for the Retarded (STAR), Mendelsohn will speak on "Mental Retardation and Parent Involvement," at 8 p.m. at the center, 820 S. Plum Grove Rd., Palatine. He has helped design federal programs for the retarded and has been active in Headstart.

Looking for some action?

If you're tired of sitting around and would like to get out and do something, the Northwest Cook County Volunteer Service Bureau needs you. The bureau can help anyone seeking volunteer work find a position.

The bureau says it is looking for cartoonists, astronomers, stock brokers, photographers, actors, magicians and clowns. Drivers, typists, tutors and volunteers to visit and take meals to people are always needed.

Interested persons can call the bureau at 398-1320 or write the bureau at 301 W. South St., Arlington Heights.

State trooper on panel

Illinois State Police Dist. 3 Trooper Thaddeus Kochajkiewicz has been selected by State Police Supt. Dwight E. Pitman to participate in the 11th Annual Midwest Motor Vehicle Theft Conference to be held in Springfield Tuesday through Thursday.

Kochajkiewicz, a four-year veteran of the department, lives in Arlington Heights with his wife Anne.

The conference will be attended by 300 police officers from Illinois and nearby states. It will deal with a number of topics involved with auto theft.

A place called Lake Content

City folk take to the north woods life

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Even when she lived here, Mary B. Good never typified suburbia. On a cheery, spring day she'd lie on a sunbaked and gather a picnic lunch together to nimbly stalk the peony fields of Charles Klehm's Nursery. She couldn't say which she enjoyed more . . . the colorful acres of blooms or the penetrating sweet odors they produced.

A firm believer in UFO's (unidentified flying objects), she frequently challenged fellow reporters at The Herald's to dispute her most recent sighting.

To enjoy her daily intake of water, she'd sip it from a champagne glass she kept on her desk next to a bouquet of wild flowers she gathered fresh from alongside the commuter tracks and highway.

BUT MOSTLY SHE loved gardening. A firm believer in organic gardening, she was instrumental in the organization of the Prairie Farm and Garden Park offered through the Arlington Heights Park District.

Active from the start with PEP (Pollution Environmental Problem) in Palatine, she hatched more than her share of praying mantis to help control the mosquito population ecologically.

Her garbage she saved and recycled as she continually spoke before garden clubs and classes concerning the makeup of a good compost heap.

But the Good family, including husband Ron and daughter Michelle, comfortably nestled in suburbia, choosing to reside in a two-story home in Arlington Heights.

On summer weekends it was usual to see the three pile into Ron's red Cougar and head for the north woods of Wisconsin, their favorite vacation spot.

Three years ago when the trips became more frequent, the returning ride home increasingly depressing, the Goods sold their house and relocated permanently on a small, secluded lake surrounded by forestland in St. Germain. Appropriately it is named Lake Content.

NOW WHEN RON comes home from work, he fishes off his own pier until dinner is ready. Recently made president of the small manufacturing firm of which he is also part owner, he is little bothered anymore by a stomach ulcer that once severely dictated his diet.

His good health he accredits to being "north of the tension zone."

Mary picks hazel nuts and gathers wild blueberries almost daily while in season. She sometimes serves milkweed buds as a side dish and snacks on the stems of young cattails. Distinguished as the "Euell Gibbons of the North Woods," she knows which mushrooms to pick and sauté and which ones are poisonous.

Twelve-year-old Mime has a small plastic boat of her own and she quietly amuses herself on days when getting together with friends is an impossibility.

ENVOIUS? LOTS OF people are. But the move for the Goods did not come without its problems and adjustments. Following the first sub-zero winter, Mary was ready to pack up and return to the suburbs. They stuck it out a bit longer however. And now they're glad they did.

The Goods discussed the move up north long before they made an affirmative decision. Work was the biggest problem. Jobs are scarce.

Then one weekend Mary noticed an ad tional average. In management particularly, there are few positions available.

"Make sure you have a job lined up before you come up," recommends Ron to anyone considering the move.

"People who think they can make it strictly on recreation won't last. You can't live off 'he land,'" he continued, explaining that while the cost of living is less, lower salaries more than eat up the difference.

Food prices are comparable to those of the Chicago area and as the land is further developed for winter sports, skiing and snowmobiling in particular, the cost of housing is beginning to increase. At the same time, its availability is on the downswing.

REAL SAVINGS ARE accrued in clothing and entertaining. High fashion is not recognized and there is little dining out. Many restaurants even close over the winter months.

"When someone applies from the Chicago or Milwaukee area to work for us, I always ask two questions — are you nature oriented? What are your wife's interests? When they move up here, they give up pollution and smog for a whole new bag of survival problems that might mean seriously cutting back in material comforts," said Ron.

Public transportation is nonexistent. Children are isolated from their friends and must rely on their parents to chauffeur them around, particularly over the summer months while school is recessed. It is one reason the Goods have retained two cars.

"But I think it's a more creative environment for children and it tends to also keep them children longer," said Mary, who adds that they are a much closer knit family since making the move to Wisconsin.

THE GOODS HAVE MET several idealistic couples who returned to city living after being chased away and beaten by the harsh, desolate winters.

They themselves almost didn't make it through that first year, a testing period that all newcomers must stick out, particularly if both husband and wife, like the Goods, were born and reared in Chicago. They had known no other lifestyle.

Mary worried about her career in journalism. The weekly newspaper for which she first worked, was extremely unsophisticated and lacking in professional standards. She finally quit. To make up for her loss, she began free-lancing nature articles and she continues to write her weekly gardening column, "Potting Shed," for the Paddock Herald.

SHE BEGAN DESIGNING and making terrariums which she sells on consignment through local gift shops. The plants she gathers from her own back woods. This spring she also completed a course in flower arranging in preparation for a florist business which she eventually hopes to open.

She devotes much time to her vegetable garden though any monetary savings from growing her own are paid out in food for the wild animals, cracked corn for the deer and racoon, sunflower for a reporting position on a small weekly newspaper in the area.

"When I saw one of us could get a job, we started making plans. I guess we were waiting for something like that to happen," remembers Mary.

Ron, an accountant, sent out resumes within a 30-mile radius of Mary's new job. He accepted a position with Electro-Mel in Minocqua, though he was forced to take a 40 per cent cut in pay.

THE GOODS SOLD their Scarsdale home and moved into a small compact ranch. Though they didn't have as much room, they were pleased with their choice. The woods and extra land made up for any lack of space.

Last year to make the house more livable, they did add a family room and two-car garage. Ron finished the utility room and wood deck himself.

"You learn how to do a lot of things yourself — either because you can't get someone out right away to do it or you can't afford to have it done," he said.

Though Ron drives 19 miles to work every day, the round trip through winding peaceful woodland is not even remotely comparable to expressway tieups.

"IT WAS VERY DIFFICULT at first accepting the difference in pay and then living within it," said Ron, who added that lower salaries force many husbands and wives to work particularly if they are trying to maintain a former urban lifestyle. And the employment rate in upper Wisconsin is higher than the na-

THOUGH THE GOODS own a store-bought grill, they prefer cooking over an open fire. Mime holds the platter while Ron dishes up fresh, deep fried muskie which he had caught earlier.

THE TWO BEDROOM ranch house the Goods purchased upon first moving north is much smaller than their former two-story home in Scarsdale. However, in return they got a lakeside view and seclusion. Off to the left, encircled by wire to ward off the deer, is Mary's vegetable garden.

attended the sessions on how to write good publicity conducted by Marianne Scott, the Herald's women's editor, and Doris McClellan, her assistant. "Class" met in the Community Room at Woodfield.

Newlyweds honeymoon in California

California was the honeymoon choice of Jeanne M. Brandeau and Vincent W. Weidner following their marriage Aug. 17 in Grace Lutheran Church, Mount Prospect.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brandeau of Mount Prospect, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent C. Weidner of Arlington Heights.

The bride made her gown of white embroidered organza with sheer sleeves and square neckline. Her elbow-length veil was attached to a floral headpiece, and she carried a nosegay of white roses, carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Jeanne chose her cousin, Lynda Brandeau of Crystal Lake, as her maid of honor, and Lynda's sister, Barbara, as bridesmaid. The girls wore blue dotted swiss gowns, with white daisy print and carried nosegays of white daisies, bachelor buttons and baby's breath. They wore white daisies in their hair.

BEST MAN was Tom Wellnitz of Tomah, Wis., and ushers were Tom Klingner and Mike Weller of Arlington Heights.

A smorgasbord reception at Nielsen's Restaurant followed the ceremony.

The bride, a 1970 Prospect High School graduate, was graduated from Harper College in secular science and is employed by Universal Oil Products of Des Plaines.

The groom is a graduate of Arlington High School, Harper College and the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater where he received a degree in business administration. He is employed by People's Gas Light and Coke Co. of Chicago.

The couple will make their home in Mount Prospect.

seeds for the birds. Even the hummingbirds are always amply supplied with their favorite, bright red sugar water.

But Mary is still quick to add that transplanted city folk won't appreciate rural living unless they have reached their own personal goals first.

"This is not an escape . . . just an extreme change of pace. Persons with real ambitious longings will never be happy."

Why stay?

"THE MINUTE I leave work, the terrain, climate and environment force me to relax," said Ron, who works an early shift over the summer in order to spend more time on the lake.

"It's hard to unwind in the city. Men bring their problems home with them. But up here the natural topography of the land is restful in itself. It's hard to explain but there's something exciting about living up here that never seems to go away," he continued.

"I never knew I had the ability to stall my motor" is how Mary describes the feeling.

"I still think a man is poor if he has never seen the eagle, the heron or the osprey," she said. "And I'd feel deprived if I couldn't go into the woods every day."

"I don't plan to stay here the rest of my life, but I wouldn't go back to the city either. I'd go to another spot in the country where I could see other of nature's delights like a flamingo, a condor, a volcano or a giant redwood."

Is it any wonder while residing in suburbia, Mary felt more at ease in a pony patch than Woodfield Shopping Mall?

A new purse will update fall wardrobe

Fashion

by Karen

There's a hint of autumn in the air. Your kids are packed off to school with new shoes and jackets. Now, it's time to concentrate on your own attire.

One basic that will update any woman's fall apparel is a new purse. Fashion is taking a definite point of view for autumn '74 emphasizing the total look. A large part of that look can be carried off with a few new accessories — especially the purse.

Slightly longer dress lengths, definitive silhouettes, the growing importance of shawl and wrap coats, capes for day and night and the new "big look" call for a new shape in handbags.

New fall handbags meet the challenge and capture their own fashion attention in a variety of shapes, colors and textures in leather, new look fabric and reptile.

THE CLUTCH, which ranked at the top last year but was relegated mainly to evening wear, is now out on the streets day and night.

If you are reluctant about the clutch bag — they are quite a switch from the slung-on-the-shoulder convenience we've enjoyed for years — make sure you check to see that your new purse can be used both ways.

One slick bag from Empress hides its convertibility in the guise of what would appear to be belting running vertically down both front and back, but with a mere flick of the finger, the straps slip upward from belt holders and become dual shoulder straps.

Recognizing that big and bold can be beautiful, handbag manufacturers are bringing out a collection of "jumbos" that are never awkward but always carefully proportioned to coordinate with the "big droop."

IN THE CASUAL vein are sailor-style duffle shapes, shopping bags and even the doctor's bag, faithfully copied in miniature of course. The mail pouch has sufficient gussets to give inner pouch without outside bulk. These are styles for women who carry the handbag, not on a string, but in their handbags.

Materials for daytime include snakeskin and other reptiles — texture is the most important consideration. For evening, kidskin, and again reptile trimmed in jewels fit the bill.

The collections run the gamut of such autumn fashion colors as burgundy, brick, deep green, grey and all of the natural tones as well as always popular black and navy.

The shoulder bag will remain, for many, essential. But, that is just another addition, for fall looks to the brief case, bucket, envelope, tote, frame and hobo bags. All are controlled to fit the new fashion silhouettes that mold the body.

The sartorial trade-off

My being the eldest of seven sisters (no brothers . . . really!) is a great source for conversation. And I have traded heavily on it. The picture of a family of seven girls takes a lot of different forms in people's minds. Up until recently I had witnessed all of them, and I thought our unusual family was fixed in its pattern.

A few years ago I happened to be visiting my parents during a semi-annual event among all the rest of my sisters. Since I am the only one who lives very far away, I didn't know what I had been missing. It was The Twice-Yearly Giant Clothes Trade Off.

What it amounts to is passing around of clothing weeded out of six closets. Even though I hadn't brought any contributions, I was included this time in looking over the loot. I came home with a gorgeous white wool dress, a pink linen suit, some scarves and a windbreaker.

IN THE PROCESS of acquiring these sartorial goodies, I observed that although the trade-off appears haphazard, it is very structured. There are very clear cut rules.

The first requirement is that one never comments on the change in weight of another sister — unless it is a loss, of course. The second rule is that a sister never criticizes the taste of another. For example a statement such as, "How could you spend REAL MONEY on THAT!" is definitely out. Conversely, a remark of "I spent $150 on that suit and it's not good enough for YOU?" would be taboo.

So that these rules are carried out, Mother acts as a sort of broker. One day a pile of clothes mysteriously appears in your room and she says, "These are some of yours (from sister) A, B, C, D, E and/or F. Take what you want."

Mother, too, watches her language. She never says "getting rid of," "has outgrown," "finds too juvenile," or "out of style."

I WAS DELIGHTED with the event, not only because I got some new clothes, but I now have more material for cocktail party conversation. However I see two problems. Now I have to be more generous about my own closet cleaning and contribute to the pool. And I am also concerned about the effect my two youngest sisters will have on it because they wear nothing but jeans.

But these problems are minor. My youngest sister gave me the pink linen which was given to her by another sister last year. Although it fit her, she admitted she wasn't ready for it yet. "If you don't want it," she told me, "give it back to me. It's so pretty that I want to keep it in the family."

It's that kind of spirit that keeps the Trade-Off going.

Best way to avoid weevils: put food in covered glass

Dear Dorothy: Perhaps your line "Bay leaves deter insects in the home" should have been followed by a question mark. I, too, had been told that bay leaves would solve my weevil problem. Imagine my surprise when I opened my box of recently purchased unopened bay leaves to discover weevils had eaten my bay leaves, also. Not only had they almost emptied the box but they had made tiny holes in the cardboard.

I believe fresh products on pantry shelves kept in proper containers and a good bug spray are the only answers to the spice bug and weevil problem. I use many household hints but leave the pest problem to professional know-how. — Carolyn Johns

I agree with your central point, Carolyn. My line really wasn't as conclusive as you have it. What I wrote was, "Bay leaves are supposed to deter weevils, but I hardly think they would have much effect on an infestation."

What you report is bound to distress the hundreds of readers who steadily recommend bay leaves as a weevil deterrent. Some are bound to ask whether you are sure you had only weevils to contend with. Aside from this, however, I support your theory about proper containers. Steadily, I urge glass, tightly covered.

Dear Dorothy: A reader asked how to separate an oil painting which had stuck to the glass in the frame. When you consider that humidity might have caused this, maybe putting the glass and the stuck painting in a freezer for a few hours will draw out some of the moisture so the painting will be released. — Helga Wilenious

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Anderson

Arlington residents wed, return to Tulsa, Okla.

Two University of Tulsa students were married in a double ring candlelight ceremony Aug. 10 at Christian Church of Arlington Heights.

Donna Leslie Wadsworth, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Wadsworth, became the bride of Thomas J. Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Anderson Jr. Both families reside in Arlington Heights.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Deborah Olsinski of Woodridge. Maid of honor was Suzanne Anderson of Arlington Heights, cousin of the bride.

Bridesmaids included Shirley Ann Anderson, the groom's sister; Ruth Blazevich, Arlington Heights; Suzanne McElfresh, Tulsa, Okla.; and Carmen Massad, Kansas City, Mo.

THE GROOM'S brother, William Anderson of Wheeling, was best man. Ushers were Martin Haeger, Arlington Heights; Steven Griffiths and William Wolter, both of Tulsa; Joseph Olsinski, Woodridge, the bride's brother-in-law; and David Wadsworth, the bride's brother.

Donna is a 1970 graduate of Arlington High School and a 1974 graduate in speech pathology from the University of Tulsa. She is currently employed by Speech Pathology Associates in Tulsa.

Her husband, a 1970 graduate of Hershey High School, plans to graduate from the University of Tulsa this December.

Before returning to Tulsa, the couple honeymooned for 10 days at Sea Island, Ga.

Groom's mother fashions bride Donna Harvel's gown

The groom's mother fashioned the wedding gown worn by Donna G. Harvel when she married Denes E. Balo Aug. 17 in St. Joseph the Worker Church, Wheeling.

Donna is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Tomaszewicz, 152 E. Dennis Rd., Wheeling. The groom is the son of Denes Balo of Miami Beach and Barbara Balo of Warren, Ill.

Donna's gown of organza and chantilly lace over satin ended in double ruffles at the hem. She wore a picture hat of braid and organza and carried a bouquet of white sweetheart roses, full mums and baby's breath. She also carried an heirloom lace handkerchief which has been carried by several brides in the groom's family.

Maid of honor was Jackie Silvonon of Chicago, and bridesmaids were Diane Senne, Wheeling; Karen Kranz, Hoffman Estates; and Karen Harvel, the bride's sister.

THEY WORE LIME voile gowns with puffed sleeves and flounced hemlines. Their white picture hats were accented by a lime band, and they carried yellow carnations, Abbey roses, light pink roses and baby's breath.

Best man was Glenn Stastny of Berwyn, and ring bearer was the groom's cousin, 7-year-old Tony Geach of Warren. Ushers were Bill Taufmann of Warren, Stewart Balbach of Galena and Craig Ward of Plainville.

After a reception at the Chevy Chase Country Club in Wheeling, the newlyweds left on a two-week honeymoon in Florida. They will be living in Arlington Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Denes E. Balo

The bride is a graduate of Wheeling High School and Western Illinois University. She is employed by Allstate Insurance Co. of Northbrook. The groom, also a graduate of Western Illinois University, is employed by Triumph Electronics of Wheeling.

Correction

Spokesmen for Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, have notified The Herald that the hospital's policy regarding delivery room procedure was incorrectly stated in an article headlined "Childbirth," published last Thursday.

According to officials, husbands are allowed in the delivery room only if they have taken a Lamaze or similar natural childbirth course. They also must attend the hospital's orientation meeting. Attendance at the hospital's pre-natal classes is not adequate to allow the husband in delivery.

The article also incorrectly stated the name of Lutheran General's head of Obstetrics, Dr. Alan Green. The Herald regrets the error.

Thrillseekers' fun dives with Evel

by JOE SWICKARD

There were hundreds of Evel Knievels seated in comfortable upholstered seats in the darkened Lincoln Village Theater in Chicago.

In their minds, they weren't suburban stockbrokers or city gas station jockeys. THEY were poised on the edge of the Snake River Canyon, ready to defy death to achieve the American dream of wealth and happiness.

Palms were wet with nervous sweat as well as slick from buttered popcorn as Brooks Brothers-clad Cadillac drivers rubbed shoulders with leather-jacketed "chopper" riders to watch Evel carry his hopes (and theirs) across the gaping Snake River canyon on his steam-powered rocket "cycle."

And just so the spectators, part of 1.8 million nationwide, could be properly attired for the big moment, hawkers offered T-shirts for $3 each. They were embossed with your choice of two full-color portraits of Evel Knievel while you waited.

ABOUT 150 persons bought their all-cotton mementoes to remind them of the bright Sunday afternoon spent watching Knievel, 34, fall in his attempt to span the canyon.

The lobby is carpeted and the management served complimentary coffee to the patrons. Outside, chopped Harleys and their riders arrived, announced by tuned exhaust pipes. Inside the lobby, middle-class heads instinctively turned to the noise.

Carefully stained and worn denim were the Chicago bikers' colors in grimy contrast to the pure white modified rock 'n' roll leather suit worn by Evel.

"Evel's the American ideal, man. He said he was going to do it and I'm going to do it," said the biker with the coiled cobra tattoo.

The cobra-man's buddy chimed in: "He doesn't want to die. Let me tell ya, when you've got three or four million dollars, there ain't no way you want to die."

Bearded, blue jean-clad bikers produced their red tickets for the ushers and swaggered in. They were soon to be lost in the dark of the theater.

THE THEATER was about three-quarters sold at $10 per seat. The audience was quiet, predominantly middle-class and all white. They were soothed with canned music.

They came in family groups, sometimes three generations together for a Sunday afternoon. The children, as young as five and six, chattered excitedly about Evel. He was always "Evel" when there's a possibility that someone is going to kill himself before your eyes and you've paid $10 for the view, it's strictly on a first name only basis.

Three teen-age boys arrived, found seats and one ran back for the buttered popcorn.

Sliding into their seats and looping their legs over the seat in front, one said, "It's amazing the way he bounces."

HIS FRIEND answered, "Oh, yea. Did you ever really see him? He looks like a dummy."

The house lights dimmed and the theater broke into cheers, whistles, and catcalls. It was like the giant cartoon carnivals where mothers can ditch their kids on dollar day in Peoria.

The screen flickered with diagonals slashes and the image of Snake Canyon, Idaho, came into blurry view.

It focused to the strains of the "Ballad of Evel Knievel."

The chaplain of Bourbon street was introduced, and he asked the audience to pray with him. This was the event, he intoned, that we all are "blowing our heads to watch." He ended his prayer. "It's fun to be saved. Amen."

And the audience cheered.

People took the opportunity during the exhibitions of an African psychic riding blindfolded through flames and spears and the feats of Sensational Parker "king of the sway pole" to run out for more refreshments.

The T-shirt man admitted he was doing OK. He also works the auto and dog shows.

"IF HE DIES, I don't know," he shrugged. "Probably raise the price, it would be a commemorative item, I guess," he said.

Evel appeared on the screen, greeted by applause from the audience. He seemed nervous and hyperventilating. He told the closed-circuit crowd to "live like God made you to" and not to take narcotics.

While Evel made his last-minute preparations, film clips of his accidents were shown. In slow motion again and again he tumbled, clothes tearing and bones breaking. People gasped and whispered in the dark.

Evel was hoisted into the X-2 rocket "cycle" with a crane and was strapped in. One of the teen-agers hunched further into his seat, and said slowly, "Go get 'em, Evel. Get down."

The blast came and it was immediate.

Fire-protection petitions circulate in Lake County

Petitions are being circulated in the Lake County section of Buffalo Grove so that a referendum can be conducted next month to transfer that area to the Wheeling Township Rural Fire Protection District.

Before the referendum date can be scheduled by a court, those supporting it must obtain signatures of 400 registered voters in the affected area. When that is done, a court hearing will be scheduled and the referendum date will be set.

A special committee in Buffalo Grove, which has recommended the switch to the Wheeling district, will request that the referendum be conducted Oct. 26.

IF THE REFERENDUM is approved by the voters, the entire village will be served by one fire department, instead of three as is now the case.

The committee and village board members favor the switch, saying that putting the village in a single fire district now, will make for an easier transition to a municipal department later. They also say consolidation of services will provide better fire protection throughout the village.

Trustee Edward Osmon, chairman of the committee, said volunteers are needed to circulate petitions. Any person or organization interested in working for the referendum should call the fire department at 537-0995.

Promoters of the referendum distributed petitions last week and said they hope to have the required signatures by Thursday.

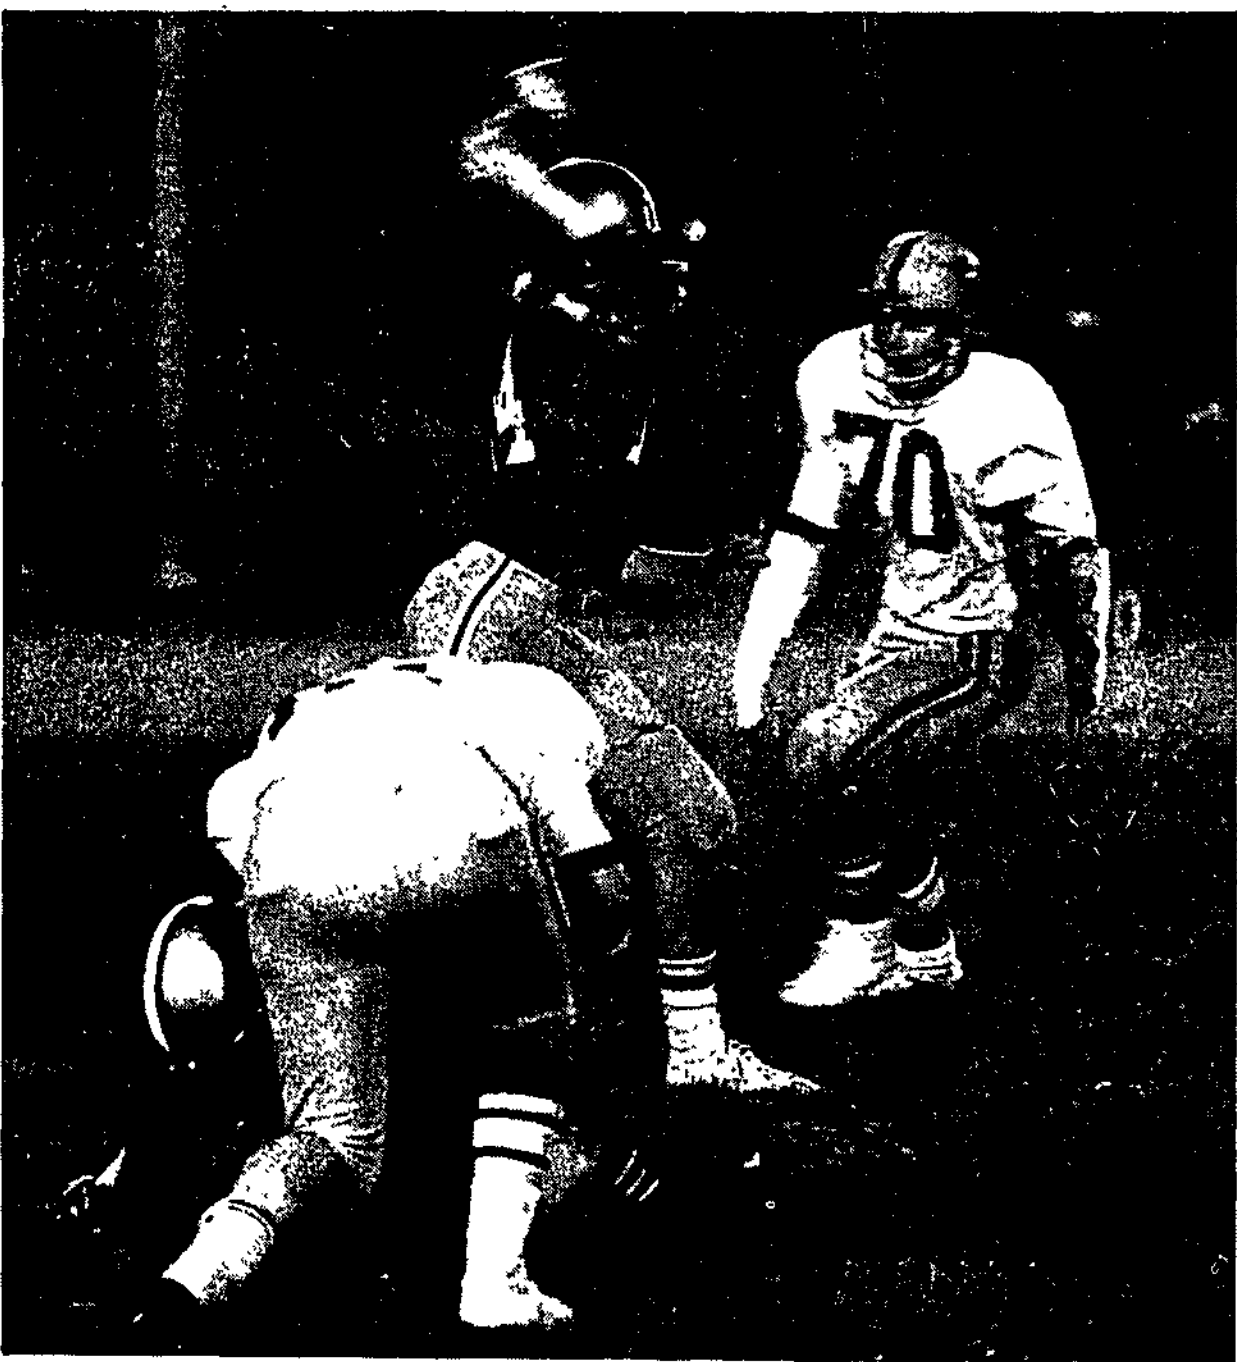

Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd., officials will make a presentation and answer questions from the public about the proposed referendum. It will be the first in a series of meetings throughout the village in which promoters will attempt to "sell" the referendum to the public.

AT PRESENT, THE portion of the village north of Old Checker Road is served by the Long Grove and Vernon fire districts. The Vernon district has said it will not oppose the referendum, but Long Grove district officials have expressed dissatisfaction.

They said they are not opposed to the village forming a municipal fire department, but they do not want to lose their area to another rural fire district. The transfer at this time is unnecessary, they said, since the Long Grove district can provide adequate service to the northern portion of Buffalo Grove.

The Long Grove district, however, does

Raupp site bids come in very high

Bids for development of the Raupp Memorial site in Lake County have been opened. The lowest bid is about twice as much as the Buffalo Grove Park District had anticipated.

Park director Stan Crosland Friday said the bids were opened by park board members Thursday night and ranged from $152,280 to $188,210. The park district had anticipated spending $70,000 to $78,000, he said.

Park officials, Crosland said, will review the four bids and probably award a contract within two weeks. Work on the site is scheduled to begin this fall and be completed next spring.

THE RAUPP SITE, which is on Denham Lane, in the Strathmore subdivision, is part of the old Raupp Farm, one of the village's oldest landmarks. The five-acre tract was donated to the park district under the condition it would be made into a memorial to the Raupp family.

The park district plans to use the site for a museum to display items of historical significance to Buffalo Grove.

Levitt and Sons Inc., a developer, has agreed to donate its Buffalo Grove sales office to the park district, to use as the museum.

The bids for the Raupp site include the cost of moving the Levitt sales office from its present location, pouring foundations, various site improvements and an addition to the building.

THE ADDITION would be used for park activities and would be available for community meetings, Crosland said.

He attributes the higher than expected bids to rapidly increasing construction costs. The cost of building materials and labor has increased substantially in recent months, he said.

Park officials will review plans for the Raupp site, according to one official, and attempt to cut expenditures in some areas.

Football first, then board meeting

The Buffalo Grove Village Board of Trustees meeting scheduled for tonight has been postponed so the trustees can watch the televised Notre Dame-Georgia Tech football game.

The change in the board meeting was requested by a Trustee Thomas Mahoney last week and was agreed to by the entire board, with the exception of Randall Rathjen, who was absent.

The board meeting has been moved to Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Bakalis names Arlington woman to sex-bias unit

Judy Brady-Keller of Arlington Heights is part of a 24-member task force appointed by State Schools Supt. Michael Bakalis to study sex discrimination in Illinois schools and recommend steps for eliminating it.

Mrs. Keller, 1210 E. Burr Oak Dr., also heads the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Citizens Task Force on Education, a parent group concerned about sex discrimination in local schools.

The state-appointed task force has two immediate duties.

FIRST, THE COMMITTEE will study guidelines for implementing Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, which prohibits sex discrimination in schools. Based on its findings, the task force will provide input for Bakalis to use in making his recommendations on putting the guidelines into effect to the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

Secondly, the task force will make recommendations for textbook guidelines being prepared by Bakalis' office.

Mrs. Keller is one of three persons named to the task force to represent parents and concerned citizens. Others on the committee include State Sen. Esther Saperstein, D-Chicago; State Rep. Susan Catania, R-Chicago; and State Rep. Donald Deuster, R-Mundelein. Illinois teachers, administrators and students also are represented on the task force.

Locally, Mrs. Keller and other members of the Dist. 21 Citizens Task Force on Education last year conducted a survey of educational materials used in the district, which also serves portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

FOLLOWING THE SURVEY, the task force appealed to the school board to make every effort to get rid of materials they found to be sexually-biased.

In response, the school board adopted a policy to eliminate not only materials containing sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination as well.

Mrs. Keller said Friday she plans to continue work on the local task force besides the state committee. The group will be involved in teacher in-service workshops during the year and will serve on textbook selection committees.

Pollution tests ordered for Heritage Park

A "fish kill" in early August has prompted the Wheeling Park Board to order that water samples be taken to test for possible pollution of the Heritage Park west retention basin.

The board became aware of the kill when Craig Stryzyk, 15, of 386 S. Jeffery Ln., asked the commissioners if anything had been put in the basin between Aug. 1 and Aug. 12. He said he returned from vacation to find between 300 and 400 dead fish on the basin's banks.

Stryzyk said he has been fishing in the retention basin for several years and said the dead fish included many "good-sized" bass and a baby northern pike.

"I think something is being dumped in from one of the industries," Stryzyk said. He offered to take water samples for the district to have tested.

PARK BOARD members said that it is possible that one of the industries west or south of the basin may have dumped something into the sewers that drain into the basin. They noted that a 60-inch sewer pipe was installed last year to drain the Dunhurst area and several industries. They said drainage from this pipe might have killed the fish.

Park board Pres. Robert Ross said that the fish might have died from natural causes when the water plants in the basin bloomed. "You always get a fish kill when the lake blooms," he said.

The commissioners, however, said the matter should be thoroughly investigated. They ordered the superintendent to have water samples taken Friday morning and to get a map of the village drainage system to determine what areas empty into the basin.

"If it happened once, it can happen again, and we could end up with a stagnant pool of water," said Comr. Lorraine Lark.

"We could lose what little recreation we have there," Comr. Hugh Wilson said.

STRYSZYK TOLD the board that since the August fish kill no other fish appear to have died. He also noted that none of the scavenger fish that live at the bottom of the basin were among those killed.

In addition to the fish kill, Stryzyk also said that the southwest end of the basin is littered with old car parts and other garbage. Park board members said that this section of the basin is not on park property, and therefore they cannot take action concerning the garbage.

The commissioners said that although the pollution may be entering from this southwest part of the basin, the park board does have legal recourse since it affects the entire basin.

Three charged in drug sale

Three persons were arrested late Thursday at the Clayton House Motel, 1000 S. Milwaukee Rd., Wheeling, after they allegedly sold $3,000 worth of amphetamines to Metropolitan Enforcement Group (MEG) agents.

Gary L. Setzer, 20, a resident and employee of the motel, was charged with two counts of sale of a controlled substance, while Mark A. Anderson, 21, and his wife Margaret, 19, of 709 S. Wilshire St.,

Mount Prospect, were charged with one count each.

A MEG spokesman said the agency had been setting up the sale for two weeks.

Setzer has been released on $3,000 bond, while the Andersons were released on $2,000 bond each.

The three are scheduled to appear in the Skokie branch of Circuit Court Sept. 19.

It's really a honey of a problem

The Richard Jordan family uncovered a sticky situation — bees in the walls

by LINDA PUNCH

Winnie the Pooh would love the Richard Jordans.

The Des Plaines family, 143 Stratford Dr., recently uncovered a wall filled with honey while remodeling their home. The honeycomb — complete with bees — measured approximately six feet tall, three feet wide and one foot deep, Jordan said.

Although the family has lived in the house since 1970, Jordan said the bees caused no problems until a painter tried to paint the eaves of the roof.

"We noticed the bees before but nothing serious ever happened," he said. "There's never been any bees in the house and no one's ever been stung."

JORDAN DESCRIBES his encounter with the bees in battlefield terminology. He began by drilling a small hole in the wall and pouring poison in.

"I put my ear to the wall and it sounded like World War III," he said. "The honeycomb was so thick, though, the poison didn't have any effect."

The Oakton Community College dean ran through a series of grocery store pesticides before calling in the reserves — an Oakton biology professor and a University of Illinois entomologist, Stanley Rachesky. Their solution: destroy the honeycomb.

Jordan brought in a carpenter to tear out the wall panels while his fellow professor stood nearby with "a powerful aerosol bomb."

"Everytime a bee came out, she zapped him in mid-air," Jordan said.

RACHESKY CONTRIBUTED a more potent pesticide and Jordan launched a second attack against the bees.

"It was like a circus — the bees just kept making noise," he said. "Nobody got stung — it was absolutely amazing."

When the wall board was torn out, Jordan said bees were "still there even though we must have killed a zillion."

"We stuck a chisel in the wall and honey ran down onto the floor. The really terrible thing is we destroyed all that honey with the pesticides," he said.

JORDAN SAID THE run-in with the bee colony unnerved him, especially since he saw the movie "The Hellstrom Chronicle" about insects taking over the world.

"The night before we mounted the final assault we could hear the bees buzzing behind the cardboard," he said. "It was just like Hitchcock movie — my wife kept checking the bedroom door to be sure it was closed."

"These bees are programmed to build perfect hexagons without shutting each other off. They've got to be as smart as all get out," he added.

Jordan received numerous suggestions from friends and family for getting rid of the unwanted bees. One college student suggested renting a bear.

"She said we should turn the bear loose in the house and he could take care of the bees and the honey," he said.

CLEANUP IS THE major problem of the Jordans now that the bees are dead. The honeycomb and beeswax were carried out in shovelfuls, Jordan said, noting that his wife used to buy beeswax for her weaving projects.

"I noticed that she hasn't asked me to save her any," he added.

Removing honey from the hallway carpeting and woodwork was "messy," Jordan said, noting that "you can't use a wire brush — you almost have to use a spoon."

Despite the ripped-out walls and inconvenience, Jordan views the Battle of the Bees in good humor.

"There's something inherently funny about the situation," he said. "People just kept coming up with all sorts of outlandish jokes."

Valenza slated to appear in court today

Former Wheeling trustee Michael Valenza will appear in U. S. District Court at 10 a.m. today to request a reduction in his nine-month prison sentence for conspiracy to commit extortion.

Valenza, who was scheduled to begin his sentence Aug. 23, was granted a delay so he could be in court to argue for a reduced sentence before Judge Bernard Decker.

The former trustee pleaded guilty Feb. 28 to conspiring with then Wheeling Building Director William Bleher to extort $10,000 of furniture from Wickes, Inc. He is one of six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials indicted Jan. 31 following a year-long federal probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers. Four of the six have pleaded guilty and three have been sentenced to prison terms.

The U. S. Attorney's Office has testified that Valenza cooperated fully in the Wheeling investigation. The former trustee testified before a grand jury the day he was arrested, and also testified at the trial of former trustee William Hart.

Valenza's attorney is expected to use his clients' cooperation with the government in his arguments for reduced sentence.

Membership party for Camp Fire girls

There will be a Camp Fire Girls "Wing Ding" membership drive party for Buffalo Grove girls and their mothers at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Emmerich Park building, 150 Raupp Blvd.

The purpose of the party is to acquaint girls in first through sixth grades and their mothers with the activities of local Camp Fire groups. Following a short program and demonstrations by Camp Fire members, there will be refreshments.

Anyone wanting additional information may contact Jo Ann Smith at 541-0121 or the area Camp Fire Girls office at 225-2267 between 8 a.m. and noon.

SCHAUMBURG WAS GIVEN a taste of Chicago Friday when the rock group performed at B-ginnings, a new night spot at Woodfield Commons Shopping Center, Meacham and Golf roads. The club's Chicago theme lingers in its decor. The group's drummer, Danny Seraphine, is part owner. For further information see story on Page 8.

Lake County petitions seek fire-service transfer not yet have a working paramedic program, something the Wheeling district has had for almost two years.

Buffalo Grove Fire Chief Wayne Winter said his department has enough equipment and manpower at the present time to adequately protect the entire village. After the new fire station on Dundee Road is finished, Winter said a pumper and ambulance will remain at the village hall fire station to handle calls in the northern part of the village.

IF THE REFERENDUM is approved, Lake County residents would benefit because the Buffalo Grove Fire Dept., which is employed by the Wheeling district, has firemen in the station 17½ hours per day, five days per week. Long Grove district firemen do not sleep at the station and respond to calls from their homes.

If the transfer to the Wheeling district is made, Lake County residents would pay higher taxes each year for fire protection.

Next year property owners in the Long Grove district will pay 22.60 cents per $100 assessed valuation, compared to a rate of 30 cents per $100 assessed valuation in the Wheeling district.

A resident in the Long Grove district with a home assessed at $10,000 would pay $22.60 for fire protection, while a resident with a comparable home in the Wheeling district will pay $30.

After the referendum is conducted, the votes will be tallied by the court and if it passes, the northern part of the district immediately will be put in the Wheeling district.

Thoroughbred season ends on upswing

Wagering, attendance up at race track

by KURT BAER

Arlington Park Race Track closed out one of the most successful horse racing seasons in Illinois history Saturday.

Total wagering at Arlington Park this summer increased 21 per cent over the track's 1973 meeting to a record $137,543,902. Attendance was up 18 per cent from 1,032,607 fans in 1973, to 1,215,333 this year.

Blessed with prime summer dates from the Illinois Racing Board and able to build upon an up turn in Chicago area racing that began early this spring at Sportsman's Park, Arlington Park officials were understandably pleased with Saturday's final figures.

"The Chicago racing public's response to the Illinois Racing Board's awarding of the complete summer dates to Arlington and the improvement of the quality of thoroughbreds racing here it engendered has been dramatic," said track Pres. John F. Loomer.

Last November, during hearings on 1974 racing dates before the Illinois Racing Board, Loomer warned that another bad year like the one Arlington Park suffered in 1973 could lead the track's owner, Madison Square Garden Corp., to shut down the Midwest's largest horse racing plant.

Arlington Park was crippled by early spring racing dates in 1973, even though the length of that meeting, 83 days, was only one day shorter than this year's season.

Another measure of the track's success is to compare Arlington Park's 1974 figures against figures for the same dates in 1973. This comparison shows betting this year at Arlington Park was 13 per cent higher while attendance increased by 7 per cent.

Track officials also were quick to point out that the 1974 summer season generated $13 million in direct taxes to the state.

THE ROSY TOTALS apparently forestall, at least for now, the likelihood that Arlington Park's owners will suspend horse racing in favor of some other, more profitable use of the race track's 430-acre site.

"We're already working on making next season bigger and better," Loomer said.

It was clear soon after Arlington Park opened on June 3 this year that track officials were prepared to go for broke. In June, Loomer asked the racing board for permission to run both day-and-night racing programs at Arlington Park after a horseman's strike prevented the opening of night harness racing at Sportsman's Park.

Later in the summer there were complaints from the track's mutual clerks that too much time was being taken between races, and that not enough clerks had been hired to handle the Arlington Park crowd.

Last month, Loomer even requested permission to open a betting window in the Arlington Park's train station, a proposal which was unanimously laid to rest by the racing board.

FINALLY, THE addition of parimutuel betting on Appaloosa horses for the first time in Illinois this year stretched several Arlington Park programs from the usual nine races to 10-race cards.

It all adds up to a $137 million. And while there are still those who say Arlington Park is not the race track it once was, that the country's best horses still are not running here, this summer's story was one of numbers. To Loomer and the other officials at Arlington Park, the numbers must look pretty good.

Thrillseekers' fun dives with Evel

by JOE SWICKARD
There were hundreds of Evel Knievels seated in comfortable upholstered seats in the darkened Lincoln Village Theater in Chicago.
In their minds, they weren't suburban stockbrokers or city gas station jockeys. THEY were poised on the edge of the Snake River Canyon, ready to defy death to achieve the American dream of wealth and happiness.
Palms were wet with nervous sweat as well as slick from buttered popcorn as Brooks Brothers-clad Cadillac drivers rubbed shoulders with leather-jacketed "chopper" riders to watch Evel carry his hopes (and theirs) across the gaping Snake River canyon on his steam-powered rocket "cycle."

ABOUT 150 persons bought their all-cotton mementoes to remind them of the bright Sunday afternoon spent watching Knievel, 34, fall in his attempt to span the canyon.
The lobby is carpeted and the management served complimentary coffee to the patrons. Outside, chopped Harley's and their riders arrived, announced by tuned exhaust pipes. Inside the lobby, middle-class heads instinctively turned to the noise.
Carefully stained and worn denim were the Chicago bikers' colors in grimy contrast to the pure white modified rock 'n' roll leather suit worn by Evel.
"Evel's the American Ideal, man. He said he was going to do it and I'm going to do it," said the biker with the coiled cobra tattoo.
The cobra-man's buddy chipped in: "He doesn't want to die. Let me tell ya, when you've got three or four million dollars, there ain't no way you want to die."
Bearded, blue jean-clad bikers produced their red tickets for the ushers and swaggered in. They were soon to be lost in the dark of the theater.
THE THEATER was about three-quarters sold at $10 per seat. The audience was quiet, predominantly middle-class and all white. They were soothed with canned music.
They came in family groups, sometimes three generations together for a Sunday afternoon. The children, as young as five and six, chattered excitedly about Evel. He was always "Evel" when there's a possibility that someone is going to kill himself before your eyes and you've paid $10 for the view, it's strictly on a first name only basis.
Three teen-age boys arrived, found seats and one ran back for the buttered popcorn.
Sliding into their seats and looping their legs over the seat in front, one said, "It's amazing the way he bounces."
HIS FRIEND answered, "Oh, yea. Did you ever really see him? He looks like a dummy."
The house lights dimmed and the theater broke into cheers, whistles, and cat-calls. It was like the giant cartoon carnivals where mothers can ditch their kids on dollar day in Peoria.
It focused to the strains of the "Ballad of Evel Knievel."
The screen flickered with diagonals slashes and the image of Snake Canyon, Idaho, came into blurry view.
The chaplain of Bourbon street was introduced, and he asked the audience to pray with him. This was the event, he intoned, that we all are "blowing our heads to watch." He ended his prayer. "It's fun to be saved. Amen."
And the audience cheered.
People took the opportunity during the exhibitions of an African psychic riding blindfolded through flames and spears and the feats of Sensational Parker "king of the sway pole." to run out for more refreshments.
The T-shirt man admitted he was doing OK. He also works the auto and dog shows.
"IF HE DIES, I don't know," he shrugged. "Probably raise the price, it would be a commemorative item, I guess," he said.
Evel appeared on the screen, greeted by applause from the audience. He seemed nervous and hyperventilating. He told the closed-circuit crowd to "live like God made you to" and not to take narcotics.
While Evel made his last-minute preparations, film clips of his accidents were shown. In slow motion again and again he tumbled, clothes tearing and bones breaking. People gasped and whispered in the dark.
Evel was hoisted into the X-2 rocket "cycle" with a crane and was strapped in. One of the teen-agers hunched further into his seat, and said slowly, "Go get 'em, Evel. Get down."
The blast came and it was immediate.

U.S., state help sought in cutting noise

Young seeks to shift 20% of O'Hare flights to Midway

by STEVE BROWN
Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley may have found a new ally in his effort to increase flights into Midway Airport if a new proposal by U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-IL, takes effect.
Young said he intends to seek assistance from federal agencies to get 20 per cent of the flights currently using O'Hare Airport shifted to Midway as a means of reducing airplane noise in the Northwest suburbs.
The congressman said he met recently with officials from the Federal Aviation Administration and state agencies to see what is currently being done to reduce the airplane noise pollution problem.
YOUNG'S PROPOSAL, which he intends to press with the FAA and Civil Aeronautics Board, is likely to please Daley who has been campaigning for increased use of Midway.

He also reported that the FAA has been using sophisticated equipment in the area to gather data on aircraft noise so that steps can be taken to ease the problem.
Young predicted upcoming FAA regulations in the next several months which will require retrofitting of older jetliners with noise-muffling equipment and use of a two-stage landing procedure to reduce noise.
"I'd like to see the shift of flights. It would certainly reduce noise at O'Hare and also benefit the economy around the Midway area," Young said.

260 trees bite dust

City uses own lumberjacks, reports big dollar savings

by STEVE BROWN
City forestry crews have nearly completed removal of nearly 260 dead trees in Des Plaines and have avoided hiring outside contractors, which cost the city more than $27,000 in 1973.
Des Plaines forester Lawrence Komos said Friday that the tree removal program should be completed in several weeks. He noted that his forestry crew and other public works employees have been able to remove all of the dead trees.
"Last year the city let contracts totaling $27,000 for this work," he noted. Komos attributed the savings to the new equipment the city has purchased to expand the forestry department.
LAST WINTER, Komos and Public Work Comm. Joseph Schwab argued with city officials that beefing up the forestry department would save the city money in the long run.
He also noted that with the hiring of four new men for the forestry department in October and the new equipment, the services which can be provided by the department should improve significantly.
Besides "borrowing" one full-time public works employee for the tree removal project, Komos said he also made use of several summer employees.

"They really worked hard and did a very good job for such a small crew," he added.
Besides the tree-removal program, Komos said his department also has completed spraying trees throughout the city for cottony maple scale disease. The cottony maple scale insect feeds on leaf tissue, often killing branches, limbs and twigs. It can generally be controlled by spraying.
Part of the spraying of about 5,500 trees in the city was handled by a private contractor. Komos said the cost of the total project was $4,994.
"If we have another mild winter, like last year, the problem could occur again next year," he said.
"Some areas might require spraying again next year. These buildups of the insects come over a period of years."
He added that residents should not expect the scales to disappear from the trees immediately.
"It usually takes a period of time for the scales to wear off naturally," Komos said.
He also noted that residents who did not spray their own trees this year, might be expected to spray their trees next spring.

He added that he hopes to get the federal agencies to move faster on this proposal and others concerning aircraft noise.
THE CONGRESSMAN, who is locked in a campaign against Abner J. Mikva, also released the first in a series of letters he plans to send Mikva during the campaign.
The new campaign wrinkle, which Young likened to the Federalist Papers of the Constitutional Convention era, is being put into effect because Young believes his congressional duties will sharply limit his campaigning time.
"Even if there weren't time limitations, this is a good way to get us into black and white on the issues. When you get into debates and get fuzzy on what the guy really said and when you start putting it into writing you have to be careful," Young said.
The first letter features eight questions on the economy which charge Mikva favored a massive federal spending program and taking opposing sides with the Americans for Democratic Action, a group in which Mikva holds membership and serves as a vice chairman.
IN THE LETTER Young seeks Mikva's position on national health insurance, guaranteed annual incomes, unemployment, revenue sharing, environmental programs, corporate taxes, nationalization of public utilities and a balanced federal budget.
Young said he expects Mikva to answer within a week.
The letters are in addition to three debates which have been scheduled and other campaign appearances.
Young also announced plans for an ad hoc congressional hearing on drug abuse in the suburbs later this month.

It's really a honey of a problem

The Richard Jordan family uncovered a sticky situation - bees in the walls

by LINDA PUNCH
Winnie the Pooh would love the Richard Jordans.
The Des Plaines family, 143 Stratford Dr., recently uncovered a wall filled with honey while remodeling their home. The honeycomb - complete with bees - measured approximately six feet tall, three feet wide and one foot deep, Jordan said.
Although the family has lived in the house since 1970, Jordan said the bees caused no problems until a painter tried to paint the eaves of the roof.
"We noticed the bees before but nothing serious ever happened," he said. "There's never been any bees in the house and no one's ever been stung."
JORDAN DESCRIBES his encounter with the bees in battlefield terminology. He began by drilling a small hole in the wall and pouring poison in.
"I put my ear to the wall and it sounded like World War III," he said. "The honeycomb was so thick, though, the poison didn't have any effect."
The Oakton Community College dean ran through a series of grocery store pesticides before calling in the reserves - an Oakton biology professor and a University of Illinois entomologist, Stanley Rachesky. Their solution: destroy the honey, come.
Jordan brought in a carpenter to tear out the wall panels while his fellow professor stood nearby with "a powerful aerosol bomb."
"Everytime a bee came out, she zapped him in mid-air," Jordan said.
RACHESKY CONTRIBUTED a more potent pesticide and Jordan launched a second attack against the bees.
"It was like a circus - the bees just kept making noise," he said. "Nobody got stung - it was absolutely amazing."
When the wall board was torn out, Jordan said bees were "still there even though we must have killed a zillion."
"We stuck a chisel in the wall and honey ran down onto the floor. The really terrible thing is we destroyed all that honey with the pesticides," he said.
JORDAN SAID THE run-in with the bee colony unnerved him, especially since he saw the movie "The Hellstrom Chronicle" about insects taking over the world.
"The night before we mounted the final assault we could hear the bees buzzing behind the cardboard," he said. "It was just like Hitchcock movie - my wife kept checking the bedroom door to be sure it was closed."
"These bees are programmed to build perfect hexagons without shutting each other off. They've got to be as smart as all get out," he added.
Jordan received numerous suggestions from friends and family for getting rid of the unwanted bees. One college student suggested renting a bear.
"See said we should turn the bear loose in the house and he could take care of the bees and the honey," he said.
CLEANUP IS THE major problem of the Jordans now that the bees are dead. The honeycomb and beeswax were carried out in shovelfuls, Jordan said, noting that his wife used to buy beeswax for her weaving projects.
"I noticed that she hasn't asked me to save her any," he added.
Removing honey from the hallway carpeting and woodwork was "messy," Jordan said, noting that "you can't use a wire brush - you almost have to use a spoon."
Despite the ripped-out walls and inconvenience, Jordan views the Battle of the Bees in good humor.
"There's something inherently funny about the situation," he said. "People just kept coming up with all sorts of outlandish jokes."

Alcohol-drug unit to get $45,000 in federal funds

Approximately $45,000 in federal revenue-sharing funds from three area townships will support a new alcohol-drug outpatient center scheduled to open in Rolling Meadows Oct. 1.

The Lutheran Welfare Services of Illinois will operate the center at 5005 Newport Dr., Suite 210, (near Ill. Rte. 62), with the revenue-sharing funds, contributions to the organization and with minimal payments that are made to the center by area residents for counseling and treatment services.

Roger Boekenauer, counselor for Lutheran Welfare Services and coordinator for the new center, said although the center will be operated by Lutheran Welfare Services, the alcohol-drug dependence program offered by the center will not be.

Lutheran Welfare Services of Illinois is a non-profit social services group that offers day care, care for the elderly and the mentally retarded throughout the country. The organization has offered similar alcohol-drug dependence programs at three Chicago centers during the past six years.

PALATINE, Elk Grove, and Schaumburg townships have allocated $15,000 each to support the new alcohol-drug program and center. Residents in the three townships will be eligible to participate in the program and attend the center for counseling sessions for a "minimal amount," Boekenauer said.

Boekenauer explained that residents participating in the program will pay for the services they receive on a sliding scale that will depend upon the income and financial situation of the patient.

Boekenauer has been offering an experimental alcohol-drug program in the Northwest suburban area since January to test the demand and necessity for such a program. He said he has found "many people in the suburbs with alcohol and drug related problems that need counseling and treatment, and who have willingly participated in the program so far."

Boekenauer will continue to offer the program during September at Bethel Lutheran Church, 2150 Frontage Rd., Palatine, until the new center is ready to open in October. Residents interested in making an appointment for a counseling session should call 282-7800, ext. 20, before Oct. 1, and 394-6797 after Oct. 1.

ALTHOUGH BOEKENAUER has been conducting the program on his own so far, the funds for the new program will be used to pay for the salaries of three full-time professional staff members, rental space, utilities and printed materials, Boekenauer said.

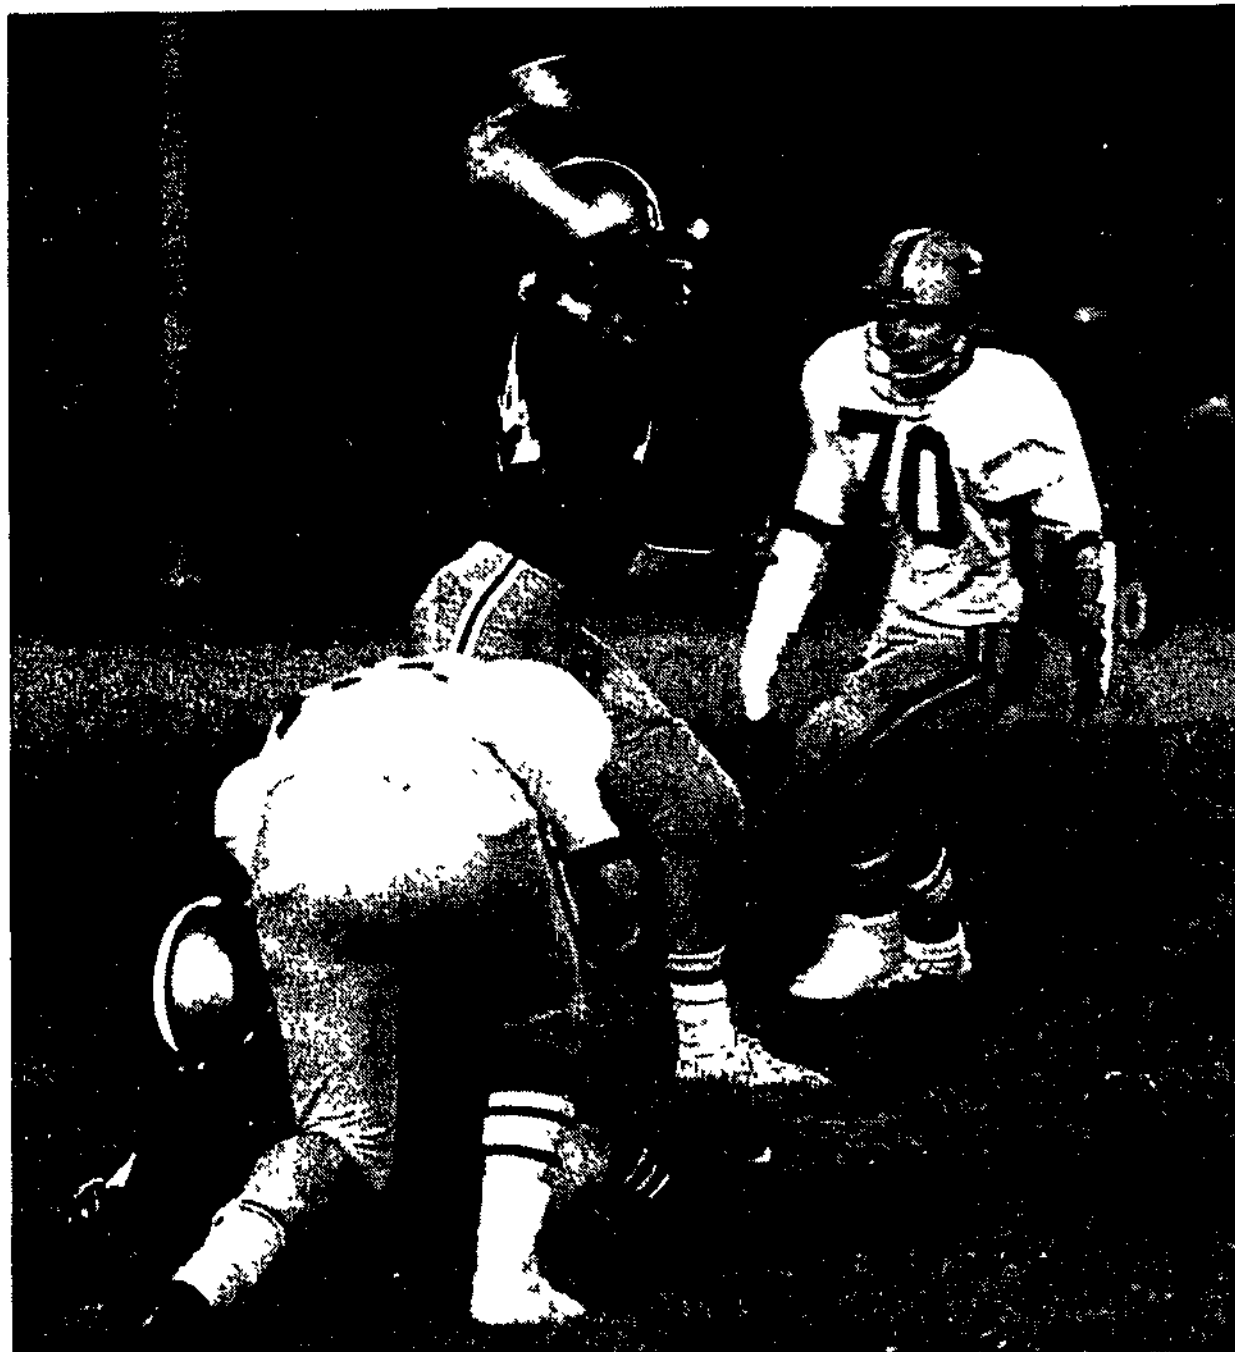

Boekenauer had originally requested revenue-sharing funds from Wheeling Township in addition to the three participating townships.

Boekenauer is hoping that Wheeling, which was unable to support the program with revenue-sharing funds this year, will be able to join with the three participating townships next year. The $15,000 allocation from each of the three townships is good only until Aug. 31, 1975, or for one year.

Individuals concerned about their own alcoholic or drug-related problems, or those of other people, will be able to meet with social workers, psychologists and other professionals at the center for counseling and advice.

STAFF MEMBERS will refer clients to area agencies and hospitals, if the "situation demands it," for the extensive and specialized treatment and care that the client needs, Boekenauer said.

"At least we are inviting the many people in the suburbs who need this type of help to come to the center so that we can counsel them and direct them to agencies that can further help them with their problems," he said.

Dobbelaere sweeps women's golf tournament

Park district activities at Lake Park and Lake Opeka Labor Day included the Commissioners Cup golf contest, sailing regatta and a fishing contest.

The sweep of the three women's divisions in the golf contest by Vivian Dobbelaere represented a first by any individual golfer in the tournament.

Tournament winners in the low gross contest were David Meyer with a 54 in the men's division; Vivian Dobbelaere, 63 in the women's division; in the boy's division Scott Kisten had a 53, and girl's division winner was Denise Goslee with a 76.

In the low puts contest winners were Earl Brennan, men's division with a 26; Vivian Dobbelaere, women's division, 30, and John Seidel had a 24 in the youth division.

David Meyer was the men's division winner in the closest to the pin contest; Russell Pennavaria was winner in the youth division and Vivian Dobbelaere took the third contest of the day in the women's division.

The Labor Day regatta winners in the Rebel class were Elfriede Elieger, first place, and Clay Mott, second place.

In the miscellaneous class a first place was taken by Robert DLeonardi and John Johnson took second place.

Roger Nelson caught 90 fish winning the most fish contest and in the largest fish contest a 12-inch bass was caught by Michael Saletta.

Thoroughbred season ends on upswing

Wagering, attendance up at race track

by KURT BAER

Arlington Park Race Track closed out one of the most successful horse racing seasons in Illinois history Saturday.

Total wagering at Arlington Park this summer increased 21 per cent over the track's 1973 meeting to a record $137,543,902. Attendance was up 18 per cent from 1,032,607 fans in 1973, to 1,215,333 this year.

Golf clubs, radio, suit stolen from car

Burglars broke into an auto outside the Royal Court Inn Motel, 1750 Elmhurst Rd., and stole a set of golf clubs, an am-fm radio, a tape player and a suit valued at $625, according to police reports.

The owner, John D. Lehman of Menasha, Wis., told police he left his keys in the auto about midnight Wednesday. He later discovered thieves took the car to a rear parking lot of the motel and stole the possessions.

Police said burglars also tried to burglarize the apartment of Laverne R. Heidenfeldt, 1287 Brown St., by prying a door open Friday.

Nothing was reported stolen, police said.

'Show Biz' theme for Maine E. gala

"Show Biz" is the theme for this year's annual V-Show at Maine East High School.

Student directors heading this year's production are Larry Kleinsteins, director; Kevin Kwiatkowski, musical conductor; Kevin Luke, musical producer, and Charles Bryda, technical director.

Joe Komperda and Dawn Lucchesi were chosen as the two masters of ceremonies for the Nov. 21-23 performances.

Brian Miku, a 1974 Maine East graduate, will assist Kevin Kwiatkowski in writing the overture.

River Trails panel to meet on school building needs

The River Trails Dist. 26 citizens committee studying building facility needs at each of the district schools will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Euclid School, 1211 Wheeling Rd., Mount Prospect.

Euclid is the committee's last stop in its tour of school buildings which has been under way since June. The committee has been assigned the task of making recommendations to the board of education on ways to make the schools meet the space needs of educational programs.

Marsha Lupton, chairman of the group, said Friday the committee hopes to present its findings and recommendations to the board sometime in October.

FOLLOWING THE school tours, in which the committee observes space conditions at each building, the group will begin assessing long-and short-range priorities for the district as a whole.

Mrs. Lupton said after the committee establishes its goals it will have reached a point where outside professional assistance from architects may be necessary. "We will need architectural help to assess the costs involved in accomplishing our goals."

She added that many of the preliminary suggestions made by committee members such as removing or installing walls, will require costly expenditures. "We have to make some assessment of what we want and what we need and the reality of economics will force us to review some of our considerations."

Mrs. Lupton said the committee may need the help of the board in finding an architectural firm that will be willing to take on an advisory role. She added that sometimes companies will offer this type of assistance for free in hopes of later

School policy book on display

A revised policy manual for River Trails Dist. 26 will be on display at the administration office and at each district school for the next few weeks.

The manual, which was revised by a three-member board of education committee in conjunction with the administration, will come before the board for action in October.

Leora Rosen, board member, asked that the document be made available to the public to allow residents a chance to come to the board with questions or inquiries before the board takes action on it.

THE MANUAL includes two new features, a table of contents and an index, as well as sections on job descriptions for both certified and non-certified personnel.

Mrs. Rosen, who chaired the board committee which included Ted Wattenberg and Sylvia Lurie, said most of the writing was done by the administration getting the contract for work which may be planned.

THE COMMITTEE'S aim is to provide the board with specific recommendations for building redesign and equipment needs. Another goal is to submit suggestions which will provide all schools with the opportunity to have the educational options of both open and self-contained classrooms.

The impetus to form the committee, with the board committee providing suggestions and some revisions.

She said the items of significance in the manual are the table of contents and the index, which will make the document easier to read.

The manual is divided into nine major sections including chapters on the board of education, administrative organization, finance and business operations, students, instructional program, teaching staff, non-certified personnel, insurance and general policies.

MRS. ROSEN is preparing a description of major changes in the manual which she will make available within the next few weeks.

The last major revisions in the manual were made in 1969.

Copies of the manual are available for inspection at the administration office, 1900 E. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect, the Mount Prospect Library and each of the district's six schools.

comprised of parents and residents representing each of the district's schools, came following Supt. John Fridlund's observations that many of the schools were not adequately meeting the space needs for curriculum programs.

The board plans to use the committee's recommendations in its study of year-round school, which may be considered as a possible alternative to more construction in the district.

Thrillseekers' fun dives with Evel

by JOE SWICKARD

There were hundreds of Evel Knievels seated in comfortable upholstered seats in the darkened Lincoln Village Theater in Chicago. In their minds, they weren't suburban stockbrokers or city gas station jockeys. THEY were poised on the edge of the Snake River Canyon, ready to defy death to achieve the American dream of wealth and happiness. Palms were wet with nervous sweat as well as slick from buttered popcorn as Brooks Brothers-clad Cadillac drivers rubbed shoulders with leather-jacketed "chopper" riders to watch Evel carry his hopes (and theirs) across the gaping Snake River canyon on his steam-powered rocket "cycle."

ABOUT 150 persons bought their all-cotton mementoes to remind them of the bright Sunday afternoon spent watching Knievel, 34, fail in his attempt to span the canyon. The lobby is carpeted and the management served complimentary coffee to the patrons. Outside, chopped Harleys and their riders arrived, announced by tuned exhaust pipes. Inside the lobby, middle-class heads instinctively turned to the noise. Carefully stained and worn denims were the Chicago bikers' colors in grimy contrast to the pure white modified rock 'n' roll leather suit worn by Evel. "Evel's the American Ideal, man. He said he was going to do it and I'm going to do it," said the biker with the coiled cobra tattoo. The cobra-man's buddy chipped in: "He doesn't want to die. Let me tell ya, when you've got three or four million dollars, there ain't no way you want to die."

Bearded, blue jean-clad bikers produced their red tickets for the ushers and swaggered in. They were soon to be lost in the dark of the theater. THE THEATER was about three-quarters sold at $10 per seat. The audience was quiet, predominantly middle-class and all white. They were soothed with canned music. They came in family groups, sometimes three generations together for a Sunday afternoon. The children, as young as five and six, chattered excitedly about Evel. He was always "Evel" when there's a possibility that someone is going to kill himself before your eyes and you've paid $10 for the view, it's strictly on a first name only basis. Three teen-age boys arrived, found seats and one ran back for the buttered popcorn. Sliding into their seats and looping their legs over the seat in front, one said, "It's amazing the way he bounces."

HIS FRIEND answered, "Oh, yea. Did you ever really see him? He looks like a dummy." The house lights dimmed and the theater broke into cheers, whistles, and catcalls. It was like the giant cartoon carnivals where mothers can ditch their kids on dollar day in Peoria. The screen flickered with diagonals slashes and the image of Snake Canyon, Idaho, came into blurry view. It focused to the strains of the "Ballad of Evel Knievel." The chaplain of Bourbon street was introduced, and he asked the audience to pray with him. This was the event, he intoned, that we all are "blowing our heads to watch." He ended his prayer. "It's fun to be saved. Amen." And the audience cheered. People took the opportunity during the exhibitions of an African psychic riding blindfolded through flames and spears and the feats of Sensational Parker "king of the sway pole." to run out for more refreshments.

The T-shirt man admitted he was doing OK. He also works the auto and dog shows. "IF HE DIES, I don't know," he shrugged. "Probably raise the price. It would be a commemorative item, I guess," he said. Evel appeared on the screen, greeted by applause from the audience. He seemed nervous and hyperventilating. He told the closed-circuit crowd to "live like God made you to" and not to take narcotics. While Evel made his last-minute preparations, film clips of his accidents were shown. In slow motion again and again he tumbled, clothes tearing and bones breaking. People gasped and whispered in the dark. Evel was hoisted into the X-2 rocket "cycle" with a crane and was strapped into his seat, and said slowly, "Go get 'em, Evel. Get down." The blast came and it was immediate.

50% of project already open space Developer refuses to give village any land donations

by JERRY THOMAS

SBL Associates, requesting annexation to Elk Grove Village, did not offer land donations to village parks or schools. The developer proposes construction of 804 units of multi-family housing and 30 acres of commercial development. The development is estimated to generate 2,018 persons including 439 schoolchildren. Spokesmen for the firm, appearing before the plan commission Thursday, petitioned for annexation of its approximately 98-acre site in unincorporated Cook County at the northeast corner of Rohlwing Road and Devon Avenue.

The parcel includes 23 acres of the Interstate 90 with net area for development reduced to 75 acres. It is presently zoned residential within unincorporated Cook County. Along with the annexation the developer wants approval to develop 40-acres as a planned development of one-to five-story buildings and the rest as a business district. PLAN COMMISSION members made no recommendation Thursday on the SBL proposal and are expected to review the evidence presented before making a recommendation to the village board. At the Thursday meeting SBL representatives gave the following reasons for annexation:

- The development would bring in about $1,726,235 a year in property taxes.
- The commercial development is estimated to generate $235,000 a year in sales tax and $6,000 in vehicle tax license fee collection a year.
- The developer said that the construction, when completed, could substantially raise the total assessed valuation of the village.
- It would be constructed in three phases with a five-to six-year completion date predicted.
- When plan commission members asked the developer if he was going to adhere to a village-required 10 per cent land donation, the developer said no.

SBL representatives said 50 per cent of their development would be open space and they plan to provide small park areas and recreational facilities within the planned development for private use but do not plan donation to the park district or village.

SOME OBJECTIONS voiced by village staff departments are:

- The preliminary plat does not meet village requirements nor show fire hydrants and water valves.
- Traffic access for emergency vehicles is inadequate.
- The Salt Creek Sewage Treatment Plant, where sewage from the proposed development would flow, may not be completed by December 1975 as expected and a sewage holding tank might have to be used.

Another concern was that SBL Associates was asking for too much time for completion of the project. In one verbal report Thursday SBL said six years, but in a preview presentation the developer had requested 15 years for completion.

'Enumerators' sought for special village census

A jawbreaking title - "enumerators" - describes the 73 persons needed by Elk Grove Village to work on a special census that village officials will put it in a home-rule classification. The special census is scheduled to be taken in Elk Grove Village during the first two weeks in October to update the 1972 population figure of 22,869. Persons interested in working as census interviewers or counters may apply at the village clerk's office at the municipal building, 901 Wellington Ave. The office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. A top qualification for those who are hired is to keep information obtained during the census confidential. Although the job could take anywhere from 5 to 10 days, enumerators are obligated to stay with the appointment until the assignment is completed. TO QUALIFY for the job a potential enumerator must:

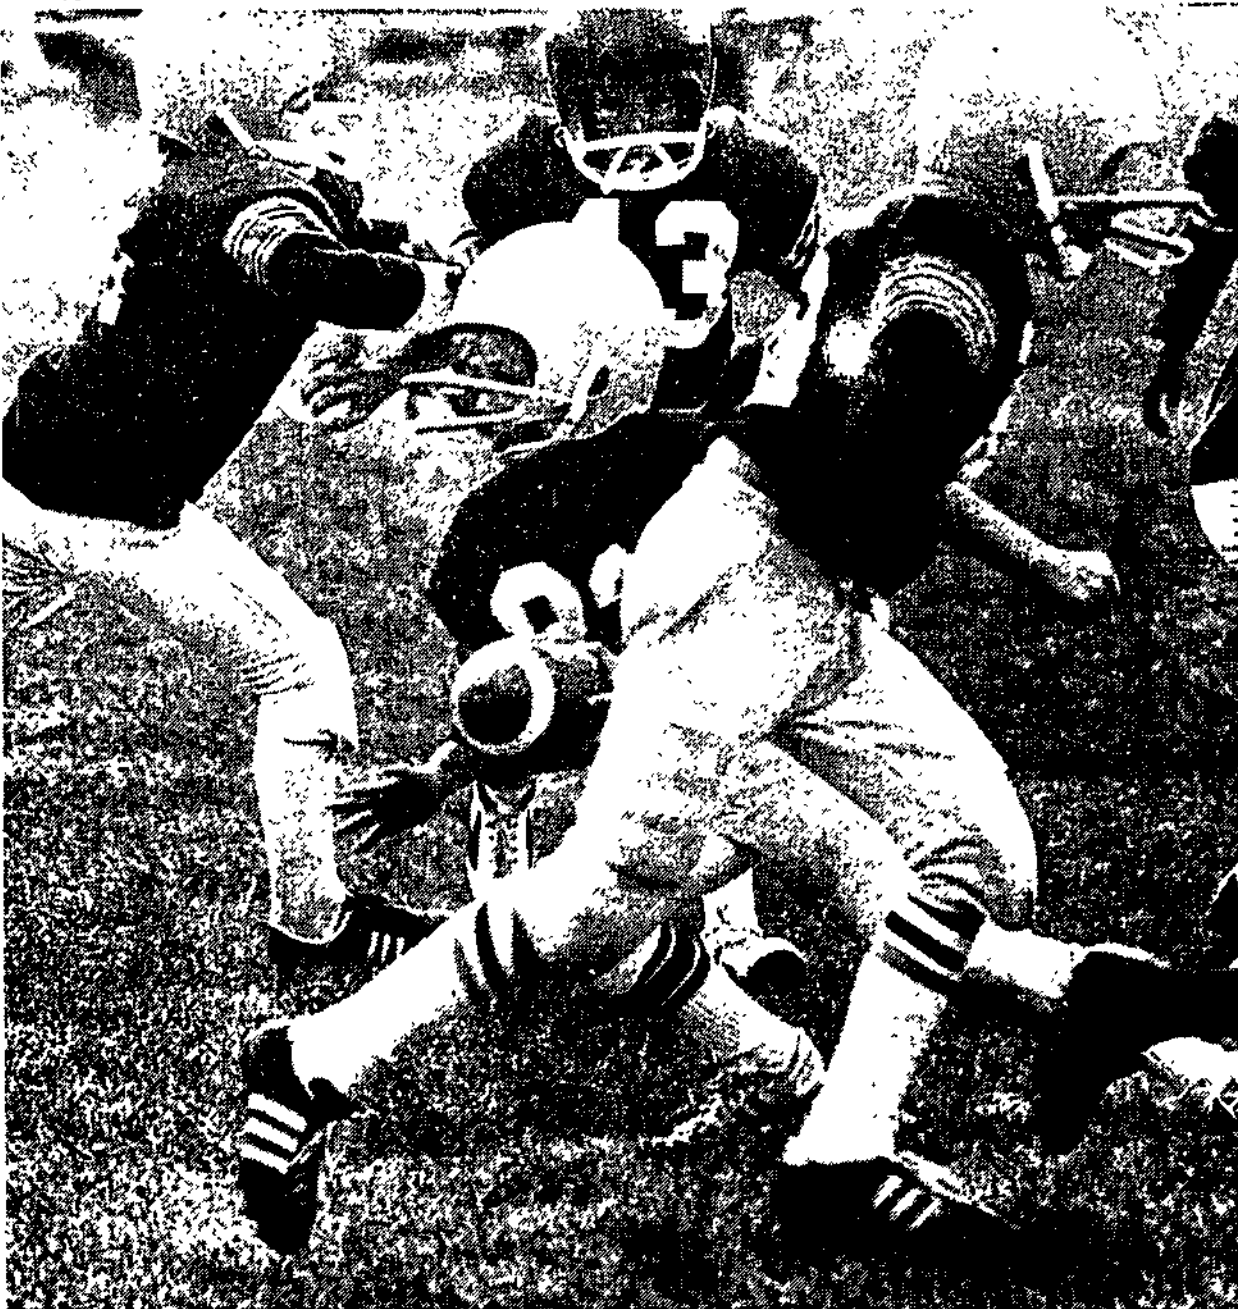

- Be a citizen of the United States with a high school education or the equivalent, and be at least 18 years old.
- Pass a written test to show he can follow written instructions, do simple arithmetic and read maps.
- Be of high moral character.
- Be in good physical condition for walking, climbing stairs and standing, and have good eyesight so he can read the print on census forms. Applicants must be able to hear normal conversations.

- Be a resident of the Elk Grove Village area.
- Be able to attend a training session.
- Work full time each day including some evening work. Since not all people will be home during the day some visits will have to be made during evening hours.

APPLICANTS WILL not be accepted if they have been dismissed or discharged from any job because of poor performance, dishonesty, criminal or immoral conduct or unreliability. Anyone convicted of anything other than a minor traffic violation also is unacceptable. Persons who engage in any partisan political activity during the period of employment or who have been employed as tax assessor, tax collectors or law enforcement officers within the last six months will not be eligible to apply. A diligent enumerator should earn from $16 to $24 for an eight-hour day, bureau spokesmen said. The salary is 13 cents for each name recorded. Applicants will be interviewed by a representative of the U.S. Census Bureau on Oct. 2 in the village and will be expected to start work immediately. WHY A SPECIAL CENSUS? Like many other communities that have requested a

Industrial park windows smashed Vandalism wave intensifies

A wave of destruction in the Elk Grove Village industrial park continued during the weekend as vandals shattered plate glass windows of at least 35 buildings. A total of at least 71 window-breaking incidents occurred between Wednesday and Sunday with damage estimated as high as $20,000 to $25,000. Elk Grove Village police investigating the rash of vandalism believe pellet guns or slingshots have been used to shatter large plate-glass windows and numerous glass doors.

In several incidents, shattered marbles apparently hurled by slingshots, were found near broken windows. Hardest hit was the American Hachet Co., 1350 Lively Blvd., where two large thermopane windows valued at $900 were shattered. Other businesses that sustained damages were:

- Advance Heating and Air Conditioning, 2001 Estates Blvd., one window valued at $175 shattered.

- Unipa! Co., 1955 Estes Blvd., a door shattered.
- VIP Corp., 1970 Estes Blvd., a glass door worth $150 broken.
- All-American Distributing Co., 1000 Estes Blvd., $350 worth of glass damage to several windows.
- Carqueville Lithographers Co., 2200 Estes Blvd., $250 worth of glass damage.
- Handy and Harman Co., 1900 Estes

Alcohol-drug unit to get $45,000 in federal funds

Approximately $45,000 in federal revenue-sharing funds from three area townships will support a new alcohol-drug outpatient center scheduled to open in Rolling Meadows Oct. 1.

The Lutheran Welfare Services of Illinois will operate the center at 5005 Newport Dr., Suite 210, (near Ill. Rte. 62), with the revenue-sharing funds, contributions to the organization and with minimal payments that are made to the center by area residents for counseling and treatment services.

Roger Boekenbauer, counselor for Lutheran Welfare Services and coordinator for the new center, said although the center will be operated by Lutheran Welfare Services, the alcohol-drug dependence program offered by the center will not be.

Lutheran Welfare Services of Illinois is a non-profit social services group that offers day care, care for the elderly and the mentally retarded throughout the country. The organization has offered similar alcohol-drug dependence programs at three Chicago centers during the past six years.

PALATINE, Elk Grove, and Schaumburg townships have allocated $15,000 each to support the new alcohol-drug program and center. Residents in the three townships will be eligible to participate in the program and attend the center for counseling sessions for a "minimal amount," Boekenbauer said.

Boekenbauer explained that residents participating in the program will pay for the services they receive on a sliding scale that will depend upon the income and financial situation of the patient.

Boekenbauer has been offering an experimental alcohol-drug program in the Northwest suburban area since January to test the demand and necessity for such a program. He said he has found "many people in the suburbs with alcohol and drug related problems that need counseling and treatment, and who have willingly participated in the program so far."

Boekenbauer will continue to offer the program during September at Bethel Lutheran Church, 2150 Frontage Rd., Palatine, until the new center is ready to open in October. Residents interested in making an appointment for a counseling session should call 282-7800, ext. 20, before Oct. 1, and 394-9797 after Oct. 1.

ALTHOUGH BOEKENBAUER has been conducting the program on his own so far, the funds for the new program will be used to pay for the salaries of three full-time professional staff members, rental space, utilities and printed materials, Boekenbauer said.

Boekenbauer had originally requested revenue-sharing funds from Wheeling Township in addition to the three participating townships.

Boekenbauer is hoping that Wheeling, which was unable to support the program with revenue-sharing funds this year, will be able to join with the three participating townships next year. The $15,000 allocation from each of the three townships is good only until Aug. 31, 1975, or for one year.

Individuals concerned about their own alcoholic or drug-related problems, or those of other people, will be able to meet with social workers, psychologists and other professionals at the center for counseling and advice.

STAFF MEMBERS will refer clients to area agencies and hospitals, if the "situation demands it," for the extensive and specialized treatment and care that the client needs, Boekenbauer said.

"At least we are inviting the many people in the suburbs who need this type of help to come to the center so that we can counsel them and direct them to agencies that can further help them with their problems," he said.

It's really a honey of a problem

by LINDA PUNCH

Winnie the Pooh would love the Richard Jordans. The Des Plaines family, 143 Stratford Dr., recently uncovered a wall filled with honey while remodeling their home. The honeycomb—complete with bees—measured approximately six feet tall, three feet wide and one foot deep, Jordan said.

Although the family has lived in the house since 1970, Jordan said the bees caused no problems until a painter tried to paint the eaves of the roof.

"We noticed the bees before but nothing serious ever happened," he said. "There's never been any bees in the house and no one's ever been stung."

JORDAN DESCRIBES his encounter with the bees in battlefield terminology. He began by drilling a small hole in the wall and pouring poison in.

"I put my ear to the wall and it sounded like World War III," he said. "The honeycomb was so thick, though, the poison didn't have any effect."

The Oakton Community College dean ran through a series of grocery store pesticides before calling in the reserves—an Oakton biology professor and a University of Illinois entomologist, Stanley Rachesky. Their solution: destroy the honeycomb.

Jordan brought in a carpenter to tear out the wall panels while his fellow professor stood nearby with "a powerful aerosol bomb."

"Everytime a bee came out, she zapped him in mid-air," Jordan said.

RACHESKY CONTRIBUTED a more potent pesticide and Jordan launched a second attack against the bees.

"It was like a circus—the bees just kept making noise," he said. "Nobody got stung—it was absolutely amazing."

When the wall board was torn out, Jordan said bees were "still there even though we must have killed a zillion."

"We stuck a chisel in the wall and honey ran down onto the floor. The really terrible thing is we destroyed all that honey with the pesticides," he said.

JORDAN SAID THE run-in with the bee colony unnerved him, especially since he saw the movie "The Helstrom Chronicle" about insects taking over the world.

"The night before we mounted the final assault we could hear the bees buzzing behind the cardboard," he said. "It was just like Hitchcock movie—my wife kept checking the bedroom door to be sure it was closed."

"These bees are programmed to build perfect hexagons without shutting each other off. They've got to be as smart as all get out," he added.

Jordan received numerous suggestions from friends and family for getting rid of the unwanted bees. One college student suggested renting a bear.

"She said we should turn the bear loose in the house and he could take care of the bees and the honey," he said.

CLEANUP IS THE major problem of the Jordans now that the bees are dead. The honeycomb and beeswax were carried out in shovelfuls, Jordan said, noting that his wife used to buy beeswax for her weaving projects.

"I noticed that she hasn't asked me to save her any," he added.

Removing honey from the hallway carpeting and woodwork was "messy," Jordan said, noting that "you can't use a wire brush—you almost have to use a spoon."

Despite the ripped-out walls and inconvenience, Jordan views the Battle of the Bees in good humor.

"There's something inherently funny about the situation," he said. "People just kept coming up with all sorts of outlandish jokes."

Arts guild presents 'Blood and Sand'

The first film in the Elk Grove High School English-Fine Arts department film series is "Blood and Sand," a silent classic starring Rudolph Valentino. Valentino plays a matador, Juan Gallardo, caught between the love of two women, one of whom is played by silent film siren, Nita Naldi.

The film will be presented Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Elk Grove High School theater. It is open to the public and is part of the Elk Grove Arts Guild autumn 1974 series. Tickets are $1 at the door or by phone from Richard Calisch, 439-4800, ext. 71.

Referendum required by Illinois School Code

School vote Nov. 2 on ending book fees

A referendum to eliminate book fees in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 is planned for Nov. 2. Board members will finalize the referendum date at their next meeting.

To eliminate book fees in a school district, a referendum must be held according to the Illinois School Code. Board members indicated their interest in eliminating the fees Aug. 22 when they voted to discontinue charging students for use of district textbooks.

The board members were informed the next day that their vote was illegal and that special referendum would be necessary to eliminate the fees.

THE SCHOOL CODE states that books either must be bought or rented by students from the district. If voters decide to eliminate book fees, the decision is binding for four years. The fee may only be reinstated after four years if another referendum is held to do so.

Thursday night the board decided to hold a referendum in November for that purpose.

The original vote to eliminate book fees came after the district received notification that property values in the township jumped by more than 40 per cent, creating an anticipated surplus of more than $800,000 for the 1974-75 school year. Revenue from book fees this year was estimated at $118,450.

Marvin Lapicola, assistant superintendent in charge of finances, recommended to the board that book fees could be dropped because of the additional revenue coming into the district.

Book fees were $3.50 for kindergarten students and $7.50 for students in first through eighth grades for this year.

Collection of book fees was deferred until the referendum is held. If the referendum passes, no fees will be collected for at least the next four years.

Youth stabbed after grid game

A fight after the Elk Grove High School football game Friday night led to the stabbing of an Elk Grove Village youth.

Michael Sargent, 15, of 276 Redwood, was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center for a one-inch wound in the stomach.

Sargent was stabbed in the high school parking lot by another Elk Grove Village youth, also a juvenile, who was arrested and charged with aggravated battery.

special census, Elk Grove Village stands to benefit from an official population count more up to date than the one established by the 1970 census.

The census figure determines the allocation of state funds to communities and for many other purposes.

In Elk Grove Village's case the benefit means more than extra funds, although the village estimates it will receive about $54,000 more in revenue due to a higher head count next year alone.

The home-rule status, provided in the 1970 Illinois Constitution is afforded to municipalities with populations larger than 25,000 and allows greater autonomy for local governments.

The village will pay $10,595 for the census.

Thrillseekers' fun dives with Evel

by JOE SWICKARD

There were hundreds of Evel Knievels seated in comfortable upholstered seats in the darkened Lincoln Village Theater in Chicago.

In their minds, they weren't suburban stockbrokers or city gas station jockeys. THEY were poised on the edge of the Snake River Canyon, ready to defy death to achieve the American dream of wealth and happiness.

Palms were wet with nervous sweat as well as slick from buttered popcorn as Brooks Brothers-clad Cadillac drivers rubbed shoulders with leather-jacketed "chopper" riders to watch Evel carry his hopes (and theirs) across the gaping Snake River canyon on his steam-powered rocket/"cycle."

And just so the spectators, part of 1.8 million nationwide, could be properly attired for the big moment, hawkers offered T-shirts for $3 each. They were embossed with your choice of two full-color portraits of Evel Knievel while you waited.

ABOUT 150 persons bought their all-cotton mementoes to remind them of the bright Sunday afternoon spent watching Knievel, 34, fall in his attempt to span the canyon.

The lobby is carpeted and the management served complimentary coffee to the patrons. Outside, chopped Harleys and their riders arrived, announced by tuned exhaust pipes. Inside the lobby, middle-class heads instinctively turned to the noise.

Carefully stained and worn denims were the Chicago bikers' colors in grimy contrast to the pure white modified rock 'n' roll leather suit worn by Evel.

"Evel's the American ideal, man. He said he was going to do it and I'm going to do it," said the biker with the coiled cobra tattoo.

The cobra-man's buddy chipped in: "He doesn't want to die. Let me tell ya, when you've got three or four million dollars, there ain't no way you want to die."

Bearded, blue jean-clad bikers produced their red tickets for the ushers and swaggered in. They were soon to be lost in the dark of the theater.

THE THEATER was about three-quarters sold at $10 per seat. The audience was quiet, predominantly middle-class and all white. They were soothed with canned music.

They came in family groups, sometimes three generations together for a Sunday afternoon. The children, as young as five and six, chattered excitedly about Evel. He was always "Evel" when there's a possibility that someone is going to kill himself before your eyes and you've paid $10 for the view, it's strictly on a first name only basis.

Three teen-age boys arrived, found seats and one ran back for the buttered popcorn.

Sliding into their seats and looping their legs over the seat in front, one said, "It's amazing the way he bounces."

HIS FRIEND answered, "Oh, yea. Did you ever really see him? He looks like a dummy."

The house lights dimmed and the theater broke into cheers, whistles, and cat-calls. It was like the giant cartoon carnivals where mothers can ditch their kids on dollar day in Peoria.

The screen flickered with diagonals slashes and the image of Snake Canyon, Idaho, came into blurry view.

It focused to the strains of the "Ballad of Evel Knievel."

The chaplain of Bourbon street was introduced, and he asked the audience to pray with him. This was the event, he intoned, that we all are "blowing our heads to watch." He ended his prayer. "It's fun to be saved. Amen."

And the audience cheered.

People took the opportunity during the exhibitions of an African psychic riding blindfolded through flames and spears and the feats of Sensational Parker "king of the sway pole." to run out for more refreshments.

The T-shirt man admitted he was doing OK. He also works the auto and dog shows.

"IF HE DIES, I don't know," he shrugged. "Probably raise the price, it would be a commemorative item, I guess," he said.

Evel appeared on the screen, greeted by applause from the audience. He seemed nervous and hyperventilating. He told the closed-circuit crowd to "live like God made you to" and not to take narcotics.

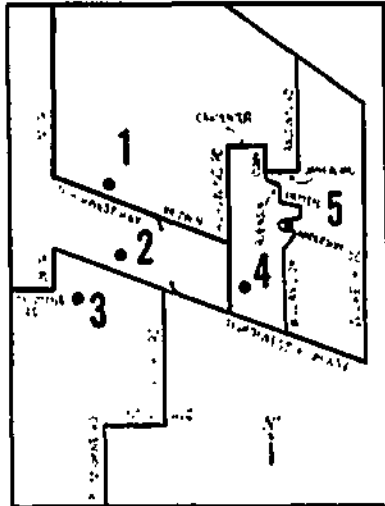

While Evel made his last-minute preparations, film clips of his accidents were shown. In slow motion again and again he tumbled, clothes tearing and bones breaking. People gasped and whispered in the dark.

Evel was hoisted into the X-2 rocket "cycle" with a crane and was strapped in. One of the teen-agers hunched further into his seat, and said slowly, "Go get 'em, Evel. Get down."

The blast came and it was immediate-

Vote scheduled Tuesday on new library district

THESE ARE the areas where Palatine residents can vote in Tuesday's referendum. Area 1 is St. Joseph's Home for the Elderly; Area 2 is Gray M. Sanborn School; Area 3 is Stuart R. Paddock School; Area 4 is Winston Churchill School; Area 5 is St. Thomas of Villanova School.

Palatine voters will go to the polls Tuesday to decide whether to form a library district.

The formation of a library district with the same boundaries as the village, would allow the Palatine Public Library Board of Trustees, an elected body, to govern itself. The library board then would be able to expand its own boundaries, levy taxes and operate totally independent of the village board, which previously had control of the operation.

Library Board Pres. Robert Jessen said that as a library district, it would be able to expand its services in the future, after the completion of the new library, into areas that are newly annexed to the village or into areas that are near to the village but not included in its boundaries.

THE NEW PALATINE Public Library, under construction at the intersection of Benton Street and Northwest Highway will cost an estimated $1 million. The cost of the library construction will be paid for with money from a $920,991 referendum approved this year, and approximately $200,000 in federal funds.

"The additional tax funds available from new residents in new areas who would be using the library would allow us to lower the overall tax rate after a while, and add new library services like a bookmobile," Jessen said.

If voters approve formation of a library district, the library tax would remain the same — 21 cents per $100 assessed valuation. The library tax would appear as a separate tax on Palatine residents' bills each year, instead of as an incorporated tax with the village tax.

RESIDENTS WILL BE able to vote from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. at five polling places.

Residents in county election Precincts 30, 31, 45, 55 and 59 should vote at St. Joseph's Home for the Elderly, 80 W. Northwest Hwy.; Precincts 1, 7, 8, 16, 20, 32 and 44, Sanborn School, 101 N. Oak St.; Precincts 2, 6, 9, 16, 17, 27, 48, 50 and 58, Paddock School, 15 Washington Ct.; Precincts 25, 33, 37 and 47, Winston Churchill School, 120 Babcock Dr.; and Precincts 4, 22, 26, 39, and 53, St. Thomas of Villanova School, 1141 E. Anderson Dr., all in Palatine.

WILLOW BEND SCHOOL students Tod Blecker, left, and Tim Gardner discover that measuring face lengths can be mathematics, too. The boys are using the "Investigating School Mathematics" series adopted by Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 for use in kindergarten through sixth grade.

'Practical applications'

Parents may grasp math

by MARILYN McDONALD

Mathematics has a new look in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 elementary schools this fall, a look that parents may find easier to understand.

After more than a decade of "modern math," Dist. 15 elementary grades, kindergarten through six, are using the Addison Wesley "Investigating School Mathematics" series, featuring more practical applications of math concepts, said Wally Fricker, math department chairman.

The new texts and supplemental materials are in full use this year after one year of trial at eight district schools last year. The entire program is costing the district approximately $50,000.

FRICKER SAID the new program is the result of history and necessity. All district programs are reevaluated every five years as a matter of policy to measure effectiveness and to possibly update them.

As the district's math program was reevaluated, student test scores were taken into account. Fricker said students were testing below national average on practical applications of math word problems while testing well on math theory.

The answer, according to a 22-member teacher evaluation team, was a program that would help children master the math process, not the name of the process. Their recommendation, given after a year of trial at all grade levels and in many classroom settings, was the Addison Wesley series.

The new math series keeps the student on his toes by mixing problems he has just learned to solve with problems from previous units. The previous math series, Fricker said, would concentrate on one operation at a time.

"The new program sticks with a concept longer before it moves on to something else," Fricker said. The program is also arranged by "color objectives." Red objectives are the basic material. Yellow objectives offer more challenge and green objectives offer the most challenge. This will help teachers with multi-grade classrooms, as well as teachers with slower or faster students at one grade level.

FRICKER SAID that the new series introduces each unit with a student investigation or game. The student is given the technical math vocabulary once he understands the math process. Fricker said the student previously was given the vocabulary and the technical explanation of the math process first. When it was time to learn the basic operation, long

Teachers OK 12% pay boost by big margin

A new contract giving teachers a 12 per cent over-all salary increase was approved by 92 per cent of teachers in Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15, said Barbara Sanborn, president of the Classroom Teachers Council.

Teachers voted in school on Friday and building representatives phoned in the results to the Illinois Education Assn. regional office in Chicago immediately after school. The Illinois Education Assn. is the teachers' union.

Dist. 15's Board of Education is expected to ratify the contract at its regular meeting Wednesday.

Teachers and district administrators have been negotiating since April for the contract. Teachers now will earn between $9,600 and $17,600 rather than the $8,250 to $16,306 range they received under last year's contract. The district will now spend 12 per cent more on salaries than last year, when it paid a total of $6,349,966 to contracted teachers.

THOMAS KELLEY, chief negotiator for the teachers, said stipulations on teacher evaluation, grievance procedures and leaves of absence are included in this year's contract. These matters were formerly aspects of board policy, not teacher contract language.

A teacher's school day is now defined in the new contract. Teachers should be at their posts at least 15 minutes before the opening of school and should remain long enough after school to meet professional responsibilities, according to the contract.

The number of days a teacher may accumulate for sick leave has been extended from 110 to 120 days in the new contract. Other fringe benefits remain the same as in the last contract, Kelley said.

Teachers began with an original salary increase request of 18 per cent. According to Kelley, this increase would bring them into line with surrounding school districts. Later in the talks, teachers moderated their salary request in order to win points on language in the contract, Kelley said.

Kelley characterized this year's negotiations as slow but smooth. This was the first year that both sides used negotiating professionals throughout the talks. Richard Zweiback served as attorney for the district, while David Tomchek of the IEA represented the teachers.

Schaumburg's superb defense handles Arlington, 17-0

by ART MUGALIAN

Someone in the Schaumburg locker room had chalked up a huge zero on the blackboard following the Saxons' 17-0 victory over Arlington Saturday.

In the aftermath of Schaumburg's big opening win, the round, scrawled goose egg represented the first of several goals Saxon coach Bob Ferguson hopes his gridders will attain this season.

It also represented a lot of hard work.

"Our goal defensively was to get the shutout," said the coach, "and we did that. Offensively, our goal was 30 points but we blew a couple chances and we didn't make it."

Ferguson emphasized defense as he surveyed his team's many football talents during a post-game discussion at Schaumburg.

"That's the strong point — our defense," the Saxon boss said.

The defenders, who count nine returning starters from 1973, limited Arlington to 124 yards gained and just 59 on the ground. They held all-league halfback speedster Craig Bernhardt to a scant 15 yards rushing.

The Saxon coach was pleased with the successful varsity debut of junior quarterback Russ Zanca, who forged a quick touchdown drive the first time Schaumburg had the ball.

"We'll polish him up a little bit," Zanca's coach said. "It'll take a few games for him to really come around. He still has to learn the pass patterns. He was throwing to secondary receivers when the primary receivers were wide open."

But Zanca didn't have to go to the air to get the Saxons on the scoreboard. It took just five plays from scrimmage, all on the ground, to spear the Cardinal defense. A 16-yard gain by fullback Tom Martino and a 15-yard burst by Don Clarke put the ball on the Card 35.

Then Zanca called for the option sweep left, pitching to halfback Scott Mielke. The 175-pound junior rambled almost untouched for the 35-yard score. Roger Biver's kick made it 7-0.

Coach Chuck Haines' Cardinals never got the offense moving. A trio of Arlington quarterbacks couldn't offset three fumbles, all in key situations, as Schaumburg's defense continually made the big plays.

Superb defensive work by Saxons Ken Jaffke, Jeff Boji, Bob Jones, Scott Scholz, Kevin Kristick, Martino and others forced six Arlington punts, including one which was blocked to set up Schaumburg's second touchdown.

It was a fumble recovery by Jaffke at the Cardinal 12 that led to a 24-yard field goal by Biver with just 1:14 remaining in the first half. The Saxons took a 10-0 lead into intermission.

Haines switched signal callers late in the half, replacing John Yeazel with Mike Schell, who threw 12 times for four completions and 31 yards. Yeazel was pulled in favor of Matt Shaughnessy in the final quarter. The third Card quarterback connected twice for 34 yards before he suffered a last-minute interception by Martino, closing off the best scoring opportunity Arlington had.

The blocked punt came early in the fourth period when Kristick, Scholz, Martino, and a couple others stormed in on punter Yeazel standing near his own 20. Scholz hatted the ball and Martino scooped it up and ran to the six before he was stopped.

One play later, from the five, Zanca ran the keeper around right end for an easy six-pointer and Biver added the kick.

Shaughnessy rallied the Cardinals one final time, hitting Wayne Eisenhuth through the air for nine yards and coming back with a 25-yard aerial to Ben Hathaway. That put the ball on the Schaumburg 20, the deepest Arlington penetration of the day. But Ferguson reinserted his starting defenders and Martino's interception saved the shutout.

The Saxon coach is anticipating Zanca's continued improvement next week at West Leyden in a nonconference game, and he also hopes to have sophomore running back Mike Christy in the lineup. Christy, out with a minor leg problem, also serves as the Saxons' first-string punter. He was joined on the injury list by 175-pound center Gary Bolger.

"You've got to remember that we had two offensive starters out with injuries," said "Fergie." "We had to polish up our act quickly since the injuries came just three days ago."

Next week, Ferguson will set the goals accordingly, but one thing is certain — if the target is a zero, the Saxons will give it a shot.

END ZONE BOUND. With a pair of desperate Arlington players in pursuit, Schaumburg's Scott Mielke races to the Saxons' first touchdown of the 1974 season. The junior halfback outran Jack Powell and Mike Schell (17), to give Schaumburg the first-quarter lead and provide the impetus for a rousing 17-0 victory. Mielke had taken a pitchout from quarterback Russ Zanca and then scampered 35-yards for the score. (Photo by Dave Tongel)

Fremd falls short in opening test, 14-8

by PAUL LOGAN

The man of the hour was so excited he had trouble locating the team bus. A football victory for a first-year head coach can sometimes fog his memory a bit.

Such was the case for Dave Keefe, Prospect High School's new leader of the Knights' football fortunes. Coming from perennial powerhouse Evanston to take over the head duties this year, Keefe was faced with something unheard of at the north shore school — a team which was winless (0-8) last year.

He took them to Palatine Friday night to tackle the Fremd Vikings in the season opener for both teams. He brought the Knights back (when he finally found the bus) to Mount Prospect several hours later as 14-8 winners.

"We didn't have many of those (close games) at Evanston," he sighed after seating out the outcome. "Coming off that losing season, they played one heck of a football game."

"I have to give them credit," said Joe Samojedny, who was also making his head coaching debut for Fremd. "They hit us right in the throat."

"Their lines did a heck of a job. They turned the ball game around by controlling the line of scrimmage both ways."

Playing with the spirit of Knight teams of old, the Keefe-influenced ("I'm a positive person") youngsters blasted opening gaping holes offensively and closed off most of Fremd's openings defensively. The action was witnessed by a large crowd on a near perfect football evening.

Prospect took the lead for good early in the first quarter, putting Fremd in a catchup role the rest of the night. Starting at their own 39, a pair of runs by Keith Mason (8 yards) and Jack Devero (4) put the Knights in Viking territory at the 48.

Then occurred the "one big mistake on defense," said Samojedny, "and it cost us. We ran that play in practice all week."

Mike Quade, Prospect's quarterback, headed off left tackle. As he was being met by a Viking defender, he made what Keefe called "a helluva pitch" to trailing halfback Jack Devero. The 180-pounder caught the ball and "made a great run" down the left side of the field and into the end zone.

Fremd tackle Jerry Parker blocked the extra point, but the spirited Knights led 6-0 with 8:21 left in the first quarter.

Prospect maintained that edge until late in the third quarter with a rugged roadblock defense. Limiting Fremd runners to just 88 yards all night were guys like Bob Thorpe, Randy Clark, Scott Doney, Bill Novak, Dave Carlson, Scott Heatherington and Dan Meyer.

Mr. Meyer, only a junior, also proved to be the offensive star of the game. The 6-foot-1, 210-pound runningback carried the ball 24 times for 163 of his team's 278 rushing yards. However, he probably won't be expected to do that much work each game.

"It was just one of those things," explained his coach. "We do just what the defense says we can do. It gives us things and we take them."

The Knights found the middle of the Fremd line vulnerable and capitalized on it. All but five of their plays featured the run of their 284 total yards.

Utilizing the openings made by such lineman teammates as Tom Callard, Chris Peterson, Doney, Clark and Carlson (Does the latter trio sound familiar?), Meyer helped set up the clincher touchdown in the third quarter. He carried five times for 34 of the 59 yards on the drive which saw Devero go in for the second time, this score from two yards out.

Quade's pitch back to Mason for the two-point conversion made it 14-0 with 2:06 left in the third period.

Mason finished with seven carries and 54 yards with Devero gaining 62 yards on just six tries. Both bettered Fremd's best runner — Rich Sharpe with 17 carries and 52 yards. But most of the night this big (6-2, 200) Viking was a marked man.

Fremd's only successful drive came in the last minutes of play. A pair of passes to Dan Robinson from quarterback Dave Wickum of 19 and nine yards along with a 15-yard face mask penalty set up the Vikings' only score. Wickum reached the end zone with a one-yard quarterback sneak. Jeff Overson made the point total eight after taking Wickum's pitch back.

With 1:10 remaining, Fremd's last chance — an onside kick — failed to work and Prospect ran out the clock.

"Even if we pulled the game out because of the onside kick, I still wouldn't have been pleased," said Samojedny. He was displeased with the lack of hitting ("If we hit, we can take care of ourselves."). The net result showed statistically — only six first downs to Prospect's 17 and a total yardage figure of just 121 yards.

But another new head coach was pleased. Keefe was also proud and humble, wishing to give equal credit to assistants Jerry Lovejoy, Bill Hansen, Larry Pohlman and Paul Fragalle.

Dist. 211 sports to have own pages

A new and what the Herald thinks will be a welcomed change begins this week in the presentation of Dist. 211 sports.

Starting today and occurring whenever necessary will be re-plating of the front and some inside pages. This simply means that some of the pages you see will look differently than the one going into Dist. 211 homes.

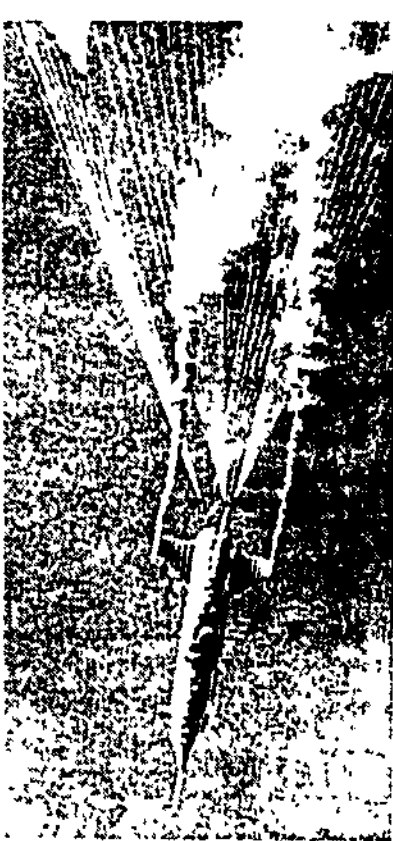

Whenever necessary, the Herald will have the top stories as well as pictures of sports happenings in the communities of Palatine, Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates on the front sports page.

This changeover was necessary because of the tremendous growth in the Herald's coverage area. Since the Herald has just one section to take care of 10 communities, 16 high schools and one college, it has become impossible to get all the winning teams on the front page. Some had to be placed inside because the sports section is of a regional nature.

Replating will now allow us to play up the best teams performing in Dist. 211 as well as the best in Dist. 214.

Coordinating Dist. 211 coverage will be Paul Logan, associate sports editor.

Teachers approve contract for 12% salary increase

A new contract giving teachers a 12 per cent over-all salary increase was approved by 92 per cent of teachers in Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15, said Barbara Sanborn, president of the Classroom Teachers Council.

Teachers voted in school on Friday and building representatives phoned in the results to the Illinois Education Assn. regional office in Chicago immediately after school. The Illinois Education Assn. is the teachers' union.

Dist. 15's Board of Education is expected to ratify the contract at its regular meeting Wednesday.

Teachers and district administrators have been negotiating since April for the contract. Teachers now will earn between $9,000 and $17,508 rather than the $8,250 to $16,306 range they received under last year's contract. The district will now spend 12 per cent more on salaries than last year, when it paid a total of $6,349,966 to contracted teachers.

THOMAS KELLEY, chief negotiator for the teachers, said stipulations on teacher evaluation, grievance procedures and leaves of absence are included in this year's contract. These matters were formerly aspects of board policy, not teacher contract language.

A teacher's school day is now defined in the new contract. Teachers should be at their posts at least 15 minutes before the opening of school and should remain long enough after school to meet professional responsibilities, according to the contract.

The number of days a teacher may accumulate for sick leave has been extended from 110 to 120 days in the new contract. Other fringe benefits remain the same as in the last contract, Kelley said.

Teachers began with an original salary increase request of 18 per cent. According to Kelley, this increase would bring them into line with surrounding school districts. Later in the talks, teachers moderated their salary request in order to win points on language in the contract, Kelley said.

Kelley characterized this year's negotiations as slow but smooth. This was the first year that both sides used negotiating professionals throughout the talks. Richard Zweiback served as attorney for the district, while David Tomchek of the IEA represented the teachers.

Village wants 'danger' building fixed or razed

Palatine officials are seeking a court order to have the owner of an alleged dangerous building at 911 E. Glencoe Rd. rectify the condition or demolish the building.

A hearing on the court order request has been scheduled for 10 a.m. Sept. 18 before Circuit Court Judge L. Sheldon Brown in the Chicago Civic Center.

Notice of the court date is being sent to John Waters, owner of the building, and to other lien holders today by Village Atty. Bradley Glass.

The building is one of two houses that have been sitting on blocks for nearly one year. The other house is located at 1004 Fosket Dr.

The houses have been in their present condition since early last fall, when they were moved from the vicinity of Palatine Road and Winston Drive to make way for the widening of Palatine Road.

In April, Waters was given 15 days to rectify the nonconforming condition of the buildings. When no action was taken, the building department turned the matter over to Glass for legal action.

Confusion on the title report of the Fosket Drive house has held up court action, but Glass indicated he would file for a court date on this parcel soon.

City groups begin planning bigger 'n' better Halloween

Rolling Meadows officials already are thinking ahead to Halloween and are planning an expanded program of events this year.

Tentative plans for the Halloween celebration were discussed last week during a meeting attended by representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, police department and Jaycees. The groups plan to take part once again in the planning of events, including the sale of coupons that may be distributed to children in the place of candy.

The money coupon program was started for the first time last year when 32 local merchants agreed to sell the coupons that then could be redeemed after Halloween for merchandise of the child's choice.

THE VOLUNTARY program was intended to insure safety during Halloween to avoid the possible distribution of tainted candy. Some $2,000 of the penny and nickel-value coupons were sold last year.

In addition to the coupon program, organizers of the program hope this year to receive permission from Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 to hold special evening activities at some schools on Halloween night.

Police Chief Lewis R. Case said organizers would like permission to open several schools, possibly Carl Sandburg Junior High School and Jonas Salk School, to hold the evening events such as a bonfire, Weiner roast and games. Case said activities could be held until about 10 p.m. in order to give children a place to go after trick-or-treating.

He said the night activities would help discourage juvenile mischief on Halloween night and would encourage youngsters to end trick-or-treating at an early hour to help avoid possible traffic accidents and late-night soliciting.

RESIDENTS ALSO will be encouraged this year to leave a porch light on if they plan to distribute Halloween articles, Case said. The method would aid the elderly, invalid or those who simply do not distribute candy by letting children know they should not go to an unlighted home, he said.

Last year the coupons were prepared by the Jaycees who arranged for the distribution of collected money to stores where the coupons were redeemed. Some 32 merchants around the city participated in the program.

Park district activities also are held annually in conjunction with Halloween activities.

Tax-levy ordinance due Tuesday

An ordinance proposing a tax levy to collect funds for the payment of a land purchase is expected to be presented Tuesday to the Rolling Meadows City Council.

The ordinance calls for a tax levy to pay off a 6.25 per cent bank loan, which the city will use to pay the $321,000 cost of 6.7 acres near Northwest Highway and Rohlfing Road. The four-year loan would require about $8 or $9 in taxes yearly per homeowner, Mayor Roland Meyer has estimated.

Meyer has said the ordinance would be proposed Tuesday and could be acted upon the same night if the council waives a first reading on the measure. The council will have to approve the measure in order for the levy to be assessed.

Meyer has said the levy could be reduced or abated from year to year if sufficient other city funds exist to pay for the $90,000 yearly land payment. Some $35,000 in the city budget is available for the first payment and Meyer has said he may suggest using a portion of the city's federal revenue-sharing funds for the payment as well.

THE LAND HAS been purchased by the city for future use, possibly for a municipally owned refuse incinerator. Costs for the proposed incinerator, which its developers have said would be nonpolluting, have risen since the system was first proposed several months ago, which could rule out its construction.

Meyer has said, however, that the land also could be used for storage of public works equipment, abandoned vehicles and possibly for the relocation of the garbage compactor station.

If the special levy is approved, it would be the first new municipal tax for city residents in several years. Currently residents pay about 63 cents per $100 assessed valuation, with about 43 cents going to the fire department and about 18 cents going to the library.

The council already has approved a near $1 million tax-appropriation ordinance for next year, which includes a $225,000 general funding hike. The tax levies approved in the ordinance could be abated by Dec. 31 if the council determines that funds from other city revenue also can pay for the levy categories.

The meeting is to begin at 8:30 p.m. in the city hall.

Fire, police panel to meet Tuesday

The Rolling Meadows Fire and Police Commission will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the East Conference Room of city hall.

Included in the agenda is the election of officers, finalization of an eligibility list for the fire department on promotional exams and a review of the rules of the commission.

Thrillseekers' fun dives with Evel

by JOE SWICKARD

There were hundreds of Evel Knievels seated in comfortable upholstered seats in the darkened Lincoln Village Theater in Chicago.
In their minds, they weren't suburban stockbrokers or city gas station jockeys. THEY were poised on the edge of the Snake River Canyon, ready to defy death to achieve the American dream of wealth and happiness.
Palms were wet with nervous sweat as well as slick from buttered popcorn as Brooks Brothers-clad Cadillac drivers rubbed shoulders with leather-jacketed "chopper" riders to watch Evel carry his hopes (and theirs) across the gaping Snake River canyon on his steam-powered rocket/cycle.
And just so the spectators, part of 1.8 million nationwide, could be properly attired for the big moment, hawkers offered T-shirts for $3 each. They were embossed with your choice of two full-color portraits of Evel Knievel while you waited.

ABOUT 150 persons bought their all-cotton mementoes to remind them of the bright Sunday afternoon spent watching Knievel, 34, fall in his attempt to span the canyon.
The lobby is carpeted and the management served complimentary coffee to the patrons. Outside, chopped Harleys and their riders arrived, announced by tuned exhaust pipes. Inside the lobby, middle-class heads instinctively turned to the noise.
Carefully stained and worn denims were the Chicago bikers' colors in grimy contrast to the pure white modified rock 'n' roll leather suit worn by Evel.
"Evel's the American ideal, man. He said he was going to do it and I'm going to do it," said the biker with the coiled cobra tattoo.
The cobra-man's buddy chirped in: "He doesn't want to die. Let me tell ya, when you've got three or four million dollars, there ain't no way you want to die."
Bearded, blue jean-clad bikers produced their red tickets for the ushers and swaggared in. They were soon to be lost in the dark of the theater.

THE THEATER was about three-quarters sold at $10 per seat. The audience was quiet, predominantly middle-class and all white. They were soothed with canned music.
They came in family groups, sometimes three generations together for a Sunday afternoon. The children, as young as five and six, chattered excitedly about Evel. He was always "Evel" when there's a possibility that someone is going to kill himself before your eyes and you've paid $10 for the view, it's strictly on a first name only basis.
Three teen-age boys arrived, found seats and one ran back for the buttered popcorn.
Sliding into their seats and looping their legs over the seat in front, one said, "It's amazing the way he bounces."
HIS FRIEND answered, "Oh, yea. Did you ever really see him? He looks like a dummy."

The house lights dimmed and the theater broke into cheers, whistles, and cat-calls. It was like the giant cartoon carnivals where mothers can ditch their kids on dollar day in Peoria.
The screen flickered with diagonals slashes and the image of Snake Canyon, Idaho, came into blurry view.
It focused to the strains of the "Ballad of Evel Knievel."
The chaplain of Bourbon street was introduced, and he asked the audience to pray with him. This was the event, he intoned, that we all are "blowing our heads to watch." He ended his prayer. "It's fun to be saved. Amen."
And the audience cheered.
People took the opportunity during the exhibitions of an African psychic riding blindfolded through flames and spears and the feats of Sensational Parker "king of the sway pole." to run out for more refreshments.

The T-shirt man admitted he was doing OK. He also works the auto and dog shows.
"IF HE DIES, I don't know," he shrugged. "Probably raise the price, it would be a commemorative item, I guess," he said.
Evel appeared on the screen, greeted by applause from the audience. He seemed nervous and hyperventilating. He told the closed-circuit crowd to "live like God made you to" and not to take narcotics.
While Evel made his last-minute preparations, film clips of his accidents were shown. In slow motion again and again he tumbled, clothes tearing and bones breaking. People gasped and whispered in the dark.
Evel was hoisted into the X-2 rocket "cycle" with a crane and was strapped in. One of the teen-agers hunched further into his seat, and said slowly, "Go get 'em, Evel. Get down."
The blast came and it was immediate.

Decision binding for four years

Referendum Nov. 2 could eliminate textbook fees

A referendum to eliminate book fees in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 is planned for Nov. 2. Board members will finalize the referendum date at their next meeting.
To eliminate book fees in a school district, a referendum must be held according to the Illinois School Code. Board members indicated their interest in eliminating the fees Aug. 22 when they voted to discontinue charging students for use of district textbooks.
The board members were informed the next day that their vote was illegal and that special referendum would be necessary to eliminate the fees.

THE SCHOOL CODE states that books either must be bought or rented by students from the district. If voters decide to eliminate book fees, the decision is binding for four years. The fee may only be reinstated after four years if another referendum is held to do so.
Thursday night the board decided to hold a referendum in November for that purpose.
The original vote to eliminate book fees came after the district received notification that property values in the township jumped by more than 40 per cent, creating an anticipated surplus of more than $800,000 for the 1974-75 school year. Revenue from book fees this year was estimated at $118,450.

Marvin Lopicola, assistant superintendent in charge of finances, recommended to the board that book fees could be dropped because of the additional revenue coming into the district.
Book fees were $3.50 for kindergarten students and $7.50 for students in first through eighth grades for this year.
Collection of book fees was deferred until the referendum is held. If the referendum passes, no fees will be collected for at least the next four years.

Teachers request mediator to negotiate salary talks

High School Dist. 211 teachers have asked the board of education to resume salary negotiations with the help of an outside mediator.
Carl Flaks, president of the Dist. 211 Education Assn., said Friday he has come up with a revised salary contract proposal — after a survey of teachers last week.
Dist. 211 teachers turned down a salary contract Aug. 30 by a two-vote margin. The association polled teachers to find out why the contract was voted down and Flaks said the survey resulted in a "clear indication of the main reasons."
FLAKS WOULD NOT comment on the results of the survey saying the information would be used in negotiating another salary contract. Items included in the teacher questionnaire were salary, class size, fringe benefits, the financial status of the district and bargaining through a mediator.
Supt. Richard Kolze and the board of education have asked teachers to take another vote on the salary agreement. Negotiators for teachers and the board reached the agreement Aug. 13. The contract called for a 7.0 per cent increase in teachers' salaries. Teachers had asked for a 10 per cent increase and the board offered them 6.2 per cent.
But Flaks said the teachers will not take another vote. Instead, the association wants the mediator to return and resume negotiations with the board. Kolze said Friday a decision on whether to resume negotiations probably will be made Monday.

THE SALARY contract that was voted down would have raised the base salary of teachers from $8,950 to $9,650.
The contract also called for a 7 per cent increase in coaching salaries and extracurricular pay for teachers, and a 10 per cent increase in the salaries of department chairmen. It raised summer school pay from $170 to $185 per week and included improved fringe benefits such as life insurance and sick pay.
Negotiators for teachers did not endorse the salary contract by recommending that teachers vote to accept it. Instead the negotiating team urged each teacher to read the contract and decide for himself. Teachers voted 209 to 207 against the contract.

Residents allowed to move in 'Green'

Residents of Building No. 5 at the Schaumburg Green apartment complex were allowed to move into their units over the weekend.
The 367-unit complex is located on the south side of Wise Road, west of Roselle Road.
Dozens of trucks carrying tenants' belongings were reported lined up at the building, ending a week-long delay for most new tenants.
Many had first come to move in Sept. 1, but were told they could not occupy their apartments because Illinois Housing Development Authority inspections had not been completed.
Some tenants were allowed to put their belongings in their apartments, others were moved into other buildings at Schaumburg Green.
Those who had moved out of their old dwellings and had no place to stay were situated in motels at the expense of Schaumburg Green management.
Don Rose, IDHA spokesman, said last week that the move-ins were not allowed because the building was not completed to the agency's specifications. IDHA has authority to hold back move-ins because 110 units there are subsidized by the Federal Housing Authority and funds are administered by the State of Illinois.

SCHAUMBURG WAS GIVEN a taste of Chicago Friday when the rock group performed at 8-ginnings, a new night spot at Woodfield Commons Shopping Center, Meacham

Gunman robs 2 fast-food restaurants

by STIRLING MORITA

Hoffman Estates and Hanover Park police are searching for a lone gunman who authorities believe robbed two fast-food restaurants within one hour last week.
The Kentucky Fried Chicken store, 120 W. Higgins Rd., Hoffman Estates, and the Jack-in-the-Box, 7420 Barrington Rd., Hanover Park, were robbed by a man Thursday night described to be in his 20s and wearing a fake mustache.
Authorities in both towns said they believe the two armed robberies are linked.
IN THE KENTUCKY Fried Chicken robbery, a man armed with a pistol stole $100 in cash from a 16-year-old female employee about 9 p.m., police said.
The man walked into the restaurant and brandished a pistol, demanding that all available money be placed in a paper bag, police reported. The man fled out the door, but the employee was unable to see in what direction the bandit fled or if he was driving a certain vehicle, police said.
The Jack-in-the-Box robbery occurred at 9:45 p.m. Police said $60 to $80 in cash was reported stolen.
A man walked into the table section of the drive-in with his hand inside his coat, authorities said. Once inside, he brandished what has been described as a small-caliber pistol and demanded money from the three teen-aged employees, police said.
The gunman fled on foot through an Ex-school board member Bedard seeks appointment

Edward J. Bedard has announced his wish to seek appointment to the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education in a letter addressed to the board.
Bedard, 350 Pierce Rd., Hoffman Estates, served on the school board from 1966-70 and was the first Dist. 54 representative to the Northwest Educational Cooperative, a four-township cooperative for 10 school districts.
He could be appointed to fill one of two vacancies created by the resignations of Donnie Rudd and Bonnie Hannon, which became effective Sept. 7.
He said that although he has been off the school board for four years, he has "kept up on it" and that he wants to rejoin the board.
BEDARD SAID the board has changed since he was a member, noting that the administration is more stable and the issues considerably different.

He said "the one thing that bothers me" about the resignations of Rudd and Mrs. Hannon is that it "leaves the board pretty inexperienced." Two board members are new this year, Brenda Pulla has served one year and Arlene Czajkowski three years. Board Pres. Gordon Thoren holds the most experience, having served since 1969.
Thursday night the board decided the positions would be filled at the Oct. 3 meeting.
At the last meeting, the board discussed the possibility of holding a special election for the two positions. However, the Illinois School Code requires that the positions be appointed.
Only if the board fails to fill a vacancy within 30 days of the resignation date can a special election be called by the county school superintendent.

THE BOARD will accept resumes from interested applicants through Sept. 17, with interviews beginning Sept. 19. The board intends to finish all interviews with candidates by Sept. 27 so that the final decision may be reached at the Oct. 3 meeting.
Bedard is the sixth person to express interest in the board positions. Other interested citizens are Adam J. Jelen Jr., 329 Baxter Ln., Hoffman Estates, a board member from 1971-74; Dr. Edgar Feldman, 128 Emerson Dr., Schaumburg, a general surgeon; Mark Renfro, 747 Kent Ct., Hanover Park, an advocate of bus safety legislation; Sherry Reynolds, 282 Ida Rd., Hoffman Estates, National Organization of Women Illinois state coordinator, and Sherwood L. Spatz, 7875 Ramsgate Circle, Hanover Park, a board member from 1971-74.

Bonwit Teller, Saks deny plans for '76' stores

by PAT GERLACH

Neither Saks Fifth Avenue nor Bonwit-Teller is planning immediate expansion into the Schaumburg area.

Officials of both stores said Friday they are not "at the moment" engaged in new store planning at the proposed Woodfield 76 "metro center."

Market studies prepared by Real Estate Research, economic analysts for Woodfield 76 developers, mentioned both stores as possible "anchor" tenants for the commercial area of the $250 million multi-use complex. The consultants contend that a 10 township area, which the "metro center" would serve, can support a major "retail fashion outlet."

While Howard Klein, executive manager of Saks' Michigan Avenue store, refused to rule out the Schaumburg area as an eventual consideration, he said the firm has "no immediate interest" in the area. Klein said Saks is "looking at" several Chicago suburban areas other than Schaumburg at the present time.

KLEIN'S REMARKS were echoed by

Kelth Stocker, a spokesman for Bonwit-Teller. "At this point we have no plans for a store in the Woodfield area," he commented adding that "any new store planning would be several years in the future."

A development team consisting of Marshall Bennett, of Bennett and Kahnweiler, Chicago real estate brokers; the Pritzker family, owners of the Hyatt hotel chain, and Union Oil Co. of California, is asking Schaumburg to annex 237 acres of Golf Road property north of Woodfield Shopping Center.

They also are petitioning for "Planned Metro District" Zoning for what they plan as an interrelated residential, commercial and recreational complex.

Their plan also calls for a 648-room Hyatt convention hotel.

Developers are asking the village to consider becoming a partner in the venture and provide public improvements, utilities, a transportation center and "people mover," probably a monorail along with a 900-car municipal parking facility to serve as a transit terminal.

Pretrial motions Tuesday in case against officials

Pretrial motions in the cases of two Schaumburg officials facing bribery charges in connection with a chemicals kickback scheme will be heard Tuesday by Circuit Court Judge Nathan Kaplan.

J. C. Smith, Schaumburg public works director; Rogers Elermann, a park district employee; John Mittvik, a village building inspector, and 22 other suburban officials from 14 communities were named in March 22 Cook County Grand Jury indictments charging bribery, official misconduct and illegal interest in contracts.

The grand jury charged the officials took payoffs from United Laboratories, Addison, in return for purchases of paint, chemicals and other supplies by their governmental agencies.

Smith, Elermann and Mittvik were later reindicted when the original indictment was dismissed because it failed to include a list of witnesses who testified before the grand jury in the bribery matter and a list of grand jury members. All three pleaded innocent to charges.

Pretrial motions in Mittvik's case have been continued to 9:30 a.m. Oct. 16 before Circuit Court Judge Daniel A. White.

Smith is charged with 11 counts each of accepting bribes, official misconduct and illegal interest in contracts. Elermann is named in two counts of bribery, misconduct and illegal interest in contracts for allegedly exchanging point coupons for merchandise from a United catalog. Mittvik is charged with one count of bribery, misconduct and illegal interest in contracts for allegedly accepting $150 in stereo equipment.

IN THE HANOVER Park incident, although the gunman had a blue ski mask over his face, witnesses said they could see what appeared to be a fake mustache. The robber in the Hoffman Estates robbery wore a blue ski cap, but it was not pulled down, authorities reported.

The bandit was described to be in his early 20s, about 5 feet 8 inches to 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighing about 180 pounds. He wore a dark blue jacket. Witnesses in the two robberies differed on the color of his pants. Hanover Park witnesses said the pants were grey, and the Hoffman Estates witness described the pants as baggy and blue.

Rummage sale to aid stricken ex-resident

A rummage sale to help an Arlington Heights resident with medical expenses will be held Sept. 21 at the Vogel Barn, 650 W. Higgins Rd., Hoffman Estates.

Proceeds from the sale sponsored by friends will go toward expenses incurred by Jesse Lehman, 635 Pine, Arlington Heights, who suffered a heart attack last year. Lehman moved to Arlington Heights about six years ago from Hoffman Estates.

Anyone with items for the sale or willing to help with the sale should contact Mrs. Donald Tolten at 885-7493, Mrs. Scott MacEachron at 882-5949, or Mrs. John Muldoon at 394-2836.

Truckdriver damages new asphalt paving

About $12,000 worth of damage was caused last week when a truckdriver unknowingly tore up new asphalt paving while driving in the Centex-Schaumburg Industrial Park.

The asphalt at the rear of buildings on the 500 block of W. Estes Avenue was installed recently. The truckdriver was not charged in the incident, which occurred Thursday, police said.

Thoroughbred season ends on upswing

Wagering, attendance up at race track

by KURT BAER

Arlington Park Race Track closed out one of the most successful horse racing seasons in Illinois history Saturday.

Total wagering at Arlington Park this summer increased 21 per cent over the track's 1973 meeting to a record $137,543,902. Attendance was up 18 per cent from 1,032,607 fans in 1973, to 1,215,333 this year.

Blessed with prime summer dates from the Illinois Racing Board and able to build upon an up turn in Chicago area racing that began early this spring at Sportsman's Park, Arlington Park officials were understandably pleased with Saturday's final figures.

"The Chicago racing public's response to the Illinois Racing Board's awarding of the complete summer dates to Arlington and the improvement of the quality of thoroughbreds racing here it engendered has been dramatic," said track Pres. John F. Loomer.

Last November, during hearings on 1974 racing dates before the Illinois Racing Board, Loomer warned that another bad year like the one Arlington Park suffered in 1973 could lead the track's owner, Madison Square Garden Corp., to shut down the Midwest's largest horse racing plant.

Arlington Park was crippled by early spring racing dates in 1973, even though the length of that meeting, 83 days, was only one day shorter than this year's season.

Another measure of the track's success is to compare Arlington Park's 1974 figures against figures for the same dates in 1973. This comparison shows betting this year at Arlington Park was 13 per cent higher while attendance increased by 7 per cent.

Track officials also were quick to point out that the 1974 summer season generated $13 million in direct taxes to the state.

THE ROSY TOTALS apparently forecast, at least for now, the likelihood that Arlington Park's owners will suspend horse racing in favor of some other, more profitable use of the race track's 430-acre site.

"We're already working on making next season bigger and better," Loomer said.

It was clear soon after Arlington Park opened on June 3 this year that track officials were prepared to go for broke. In June, Loomer asked the racing board for permission to run both day-and-night racing programs at Arlington Park after a horseman's strike prevented the opening of night harness racing at Sportsman's Park.

Later in the summer there were complaints from the track's mutual clerks that too much time was being taken between races, and that not enough clerks had been hired to handle the Arlington Park crowd.

Last month, Loomer even requested permission to open a betting window in the Arlington Park's train station, a proposal which was unanimously laid to rest by the racing board.

FINALLY, THE addition of parimutuel betting on Appaloosa horses for the first time in Illinois this year stretched several Arlington Park programs from the usual nine races to 10-race cards.

It all adds up to a $137 million. And while there are still those who say Arlington Park is not the race track it once was, that the country's best horses still are not running here, this summer's story was one of numbers. To Loomer and the other officials at Arlington Park, the numbers must look pretty good.

Local bicyclist, 8, in serious condition

A Schaumburg youth was in serious condition Sunday at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, after being struck by a car Saturday afternoon.

Randall Hayden, 8, 1935 Song Sparrow Ct., sustained multiple injuries after he rode between two cars stopped in a construction area along Algonquin Road and was struck by a moving eastbound vehicle, police said.

Jesus Irizarry, 21, of 820 Oakmont Rd., Hoffman Estates, driver of the car which struck young Hayden, was not cited, police said.

Hayden was taken by Schaumburg Fire Dept. ambulance to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights. He was in the intensive care section Sunday, a hospital spokesman said.

It's really a honey of a problem

The Richard Jordan family uncovered a sticky situation — bees in the walls

by LINDA PUNCH

Winnie the Pooh would love the Richard Jordans.

The Des Plaines family, 143 Stratford Dr., recently uncovered a wall filled with honey while remodeling their home. The honeycomb — complete with bees — measured approximately six feet tall, three feet wide and one foot deep, Jordan said.

Although the family has lived in the house since 1970, Jordan said the bees caused no problems until a painter tried to paint the eaves of the roof.

"We noticed the bees before but nothing serious ever happened," he said. "There's never been any bees in the house and no one's ever been stung."

JORDAN DESCRIBES his encounter with the bees in battlefield terminology. He began by drilling a small hole in the wall and pouring poison in.

"I put my ear to the wall and it sounded like World War III," he said. "The honeycomb was so thick, though, the poison didn't have any effect."

The Oakton Community College dean ran through a series of grocery store pesticides before calling in the reserves — an Oakton biology professor and a University of Illinois entomologist, Stanley Rachesky. Their solution: destroy the honeycomb.

Jordan brought in a carpenter to tear out the wall panels while his fellow professor stood nearby with "a powerful aerosol bomb."

"Everytime a bee came out, she zapped him in mid-air," Jordan said.

RACHESKY CONTRIBUTED a more potent pesticide and Jordan launched a second attack against the bees.

When the wall board was torn out, Jordan said bees were "still there even though we must have killed a zillion."

"We stuck a chisel in the wall and honey ran down onto the floor. The really terrible thing is we destroyed all that honey with the pesticides," he said.

JORDAN SAID THE run-in with the bee colony unnerved him, especially since he saw the movie "The Hellstrom Chronicle" about insects taking over the world.

"The night before we mounted the final assault we could hear the bees buzzing behind the cardboard," he said. "It was just like Hitchcock movie — my wife kept checking the bedroom door to be sure it was closed."

"These bees are programmed to build perfect hexagons without shutting each other off. They've got to be as smart as all get out," he added.

Jordan received numerous suggestions from friends and family for getting rid of the unwanted bees. One college student suggested renting a bear.

"She said we should turn the bear loose in the house and he could take care of the bees and the honey," he said.

CLEANUP IS THE major problem of the Jordans now that the bees are dead. The honeycomb and beeswax were carried out in shovelfuls, Jordan said, noting that his wife used to buy beeswax for her weaving projects.

"I noticed that she hasn't asked me to save her any," he added.

Removing honey from the hallway carpeting and woodwork was "messy," Jordan said, noting that "you can't use a wire brush — you almost have to use a spoon."

Despite the ripped-out walls and inconvenience, Jordan views the Battle of the Bees in good humor.

"There's something inherently funny about the situation," he said. "People just kept coming up with all sorts of outlandish jokes."

Hearings resume on Hill Dale plan

Hearings will continue at 8 p.m. Wednesday on plans to resume development of about 100 remaining acres of Hill Dale Villages, Hoffman Estates.

Hill Dale Villages, currently owned by Multicon Properties Inc., lies between Higgins Road and the Northwest Tollway, east of Barrington Square and west of the Highlands subdivision. Multicon, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Bethlehem Steel, is in liquidation, and its Hoffman Estates acreage is being sold to Python Designers-Builders Inc., and The Bigelow Co. Inc., both of Rolling Meadows.

Plan commissioners met Friday to hear Python's proposal for the major share of the unbuilt acreage, amounting to more than 100 of the total 258-acre Hill Dale Villages site. Although Python's officers sent the commission a telegram asking for a delay, members informally examined drawings of the Python project plan after the meeting. Formal hearings will start Wednesday for Python, and continue then for Bigelow.

THE PROPOSAL indicates a townhouse and condominium section, including several six-story buildings. Also proposed is a medical center complex near Hassell Road.

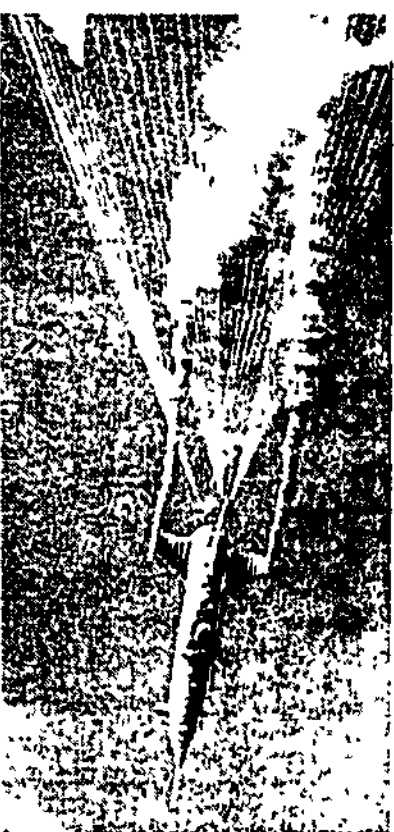

Python spokesmen said last month they were seeking approval of only the portion of their development devoted to a major recreation complex. They proposed expanding the existing Hill Dale Lodge restaurant, adding a total of 132,000 square feet of building space to house 12 tennis, four handball and two squash courts. Larger banquet facilities also would be provided for the restaurant and the building, together with an existing 18-hole golf course, would become Hill Dale Recreation Center Inc.

However, commissioners indicated Friday they will insist on reviewing all proposed development in the entire subdivision as one unified plan.

Perry Bigelow of The Bigelow Co. Inc., was told Friday his plan for a very small section of the site cannot be approved until after Python's proposal is examined.

BIGELOW WANTS to resubdivide a nine-lot area south of Hassell Road and west of Hassell Place for 13 homes in the $90,000 price range. The homes would flank Fairview Court, and Bigelow's drawings show an intersection with Club House Drive at the south end of Fairview. Commissioners noted all traffic from the recreation center will use Club House, and suggested Fairview would receive a great deal of that traffic.

Bigelow's subdivision of high-priced luxury homes would not benefit from heavy traffic, suggested commissioners. They instructed Bigelow to ask Python its precise intentions for Club House. Bigelow said Python has told him it would vacate that part of Club House, cutting out the intersection, unless the village wants the through access for emergency vehicles. Commissioners want a written statement from Python detailing that possibility.

Thrillseekers' fun dives with Evel

by JOE SWICKARD

There were hundreds of Evel Knievels seated in comfortable upholstered seats in the darkened Lincoln Village Theater in Chicago.

In their minds, they weren't suburban stockbrokers or city gas station jockeys. THEY were poised on the edge of the Snake River Canyon, ready to defy death to achieve the American dream of wealth and happiness.

Palms were wet with nervous sweat as well as slick from buttered popcorn as Brooks Brothers-clad Cadillac drivers rubbed shoulders with leather-jacketed "chopper" riders to watch Evel carry his hopes (and theirs) across the gaping Snake River canyon on his steam-powered rocket/"cycle."

And just so the spectators, part of 1.8 million nationwide, could be properly attired for the big moment, hawkers offered T-shirts for $3 each. They were embossed with your choice of two full-color portraits of Evel Knievel while you waited.

ABOUT 150 persons bought their all-cotton mementoes to remind them of the bright Sunday afternoon spent watching Knievel, 34, fall in his attempt to span the canyon.

The lobby is carpeted and the management served complimentary coffee to the patrons. Outside, chopped Harleys and their riders arrived, announced by tuned exhaust pipes. Inside the lobby, middle-class heads instinctively turned to the noise.

Carefully stained and worn denims were the Chicago bikers' colors in grimy contrast to the pure white modified rock 'n' roll leather suit worn by Evel.

"Evel's the American ideal, man. He said he was going to do it and I'm going to do it," said the biker with the coiled cobra tattoo.

The cobra-man's buddy chipped in: "He doesn't want to die. Let me tell ya, when you've got three or four million dollars, there ain't no way you want to die."

Bearded, blue jean-clad bikers produced their red tickets for the ushers and swaggered in. They were soon to be lost in the dark of the theater.

THE THEATER was about three-quarters sold at $10 per seat. The audience was quiet, predominantly middle-class and all white. They were soothed with canned music.

They came in family groups, sometimes three generations together for a Sunday afternoon. The children, as young as five and six, chattered excitedly about Evel. He was always "Evel" when there's a possibility that someone is going to kill himself before your eyes and you've paid $10 for the view, it's strictly on a first name only basis.

Three teen-age boys arrived, found seats and one ran back for the buttered popcorn.

Sliding into their seats and looping their legs over the seat in front, one said, "It's amazing the way he bounces."

HIS FRIEND answered, "Oh, yea. Did you ever really see him? He looks like a dummy."

The house lights dimmed and the theater broke into cheers, whistles, and cat-calls. It was like the giant cartoon carnivals where mothers can ditch their kids on dollar day in Peoria.

The screen flickered with diagonals slashes and the image of Snake Canyon, Idaho, came into blurry view.

It focused to the strains of the "Ballad of Evel Knievel."

The chaplain of Bourbon street was introduced, and he asked the audience to pray with him. This was the event, he intoned, that we all are "blowing our heads to watch." He ended his prayer. "It's fun to be saved. Amen."

And the audience cheered.

People took the opportunity during the exhibitions of an African psychic riding blindfolded through flames and spears and the feats of Sensational Parker "king of the sway pole." to run out for more refreshments.

The T-shirt man admitted he was doing OK. He also works the auto and dog shows.

"IF HE DIES, I don't know," he shrugged. "Probably raise the price, it would be a commemorative item, I guess," he said.

Evel appeared on the screen, greeted by applause from the audience. He seemed nervous and hyperventilating. He told the closed-circuit crowd to "hve like God made you to" and not to take narcotics.

While Evel made his last-minute preparations, film clips of his accidents were shown. In slow motion again and again he tumbled, clothes tearing and bones breaking. People gasped and whispered in the dark.

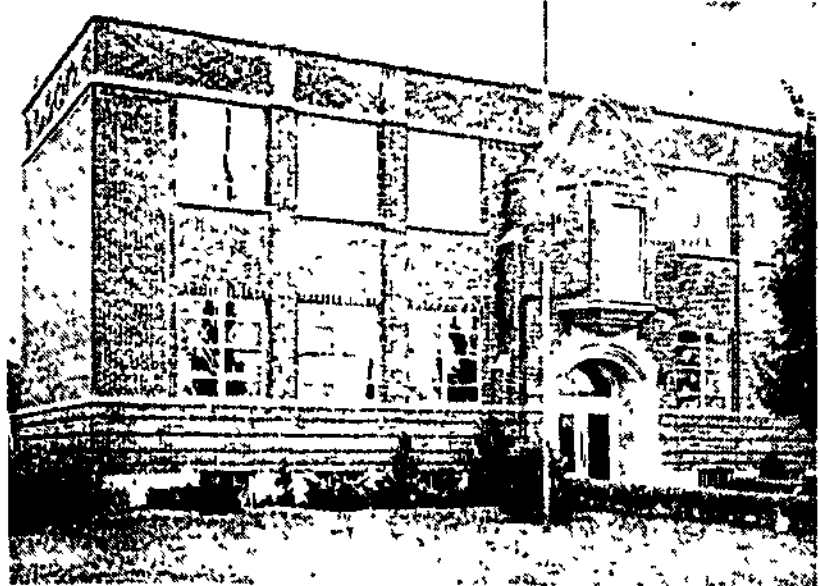

Evel was hoisted into the X-2 rocket "cycle" with a crane and was strapped in. One of the teen-agers hunched further into his seat, and said slowly, "Go get 'em, Evel. Get down."

The blast came and it was immediate-

Central saga

The landmark structure (it opened in 1927) at Central Road and Main Street is finally coming down, but the site will have a good use—a new public library building to serve both young and old

The brand, spanking new Central School, circa 1927.

Elmhurst Road S-curve may get 'banking' job

The notorious S-curve on S. Elmhurst Road in Mount Prospect may be regraded to help ease cars around the bends.

Village Trustee George B. Anderson indicated the road may be banked to cut down on the number of accidents along the S-curve between Milburn Street and Shaboneo Trail.

The banking would be part of an overall improvement project that includes installation of a traffic signal at Elmhurst and Lincoln Street.

ORIGINALLY, ONLY the traffic signal was contemplated, in order to slow down traffic on the curve. However, the village board's fire and police committee, which Anderson chairs, last week voted 3 to 0 to recommend that the full board consider banking the road as well. "It wouldn't make sense to improve something and not make it safe," said Anderson.

Banking would more than double the estimated cost of the project, from $250,000 to $600,000.

Anderson is counting on federal and state monies to finance the bulk of the project. He said he hopes federal funds can be made available to pay for 70 per cent of the cost, and state funds for another 20 per cent. The village, he estimated, would pay $35,000 to $50,000 toward the improvement.

The Northwest Municipal Conference is expected to endorse the Elmhurst Road project for federal funding at its Sept. 18 meeting. A conference committee has given it tentative approval.

THE VILLAGE has set aside $125,000 in the current budget for the project. When the budget was drawn last spring, village trustees appropriated half the estimated cost of the traffic signal, with the hope of securing federal funds to pay the remaining $125,000. It was understood that if a grant is not available, the village would budget the necessary funds next year and finance the entire project itself.

The S. Elmhurst Road S-curve has been the scene of numerous accidents over the years, including a fatality last spring. Police have instituted a crackdown on speeders in the area, but Anderson maintained complete upgrading of the curve is needed to reduce the number of mishaps.

In its heyday, Central School was where generations of Mount Prospect children learned how to multiply and spell. It was where youngsters spent hours memorizing the Gettysburg Address and the periodic table of the elements. Where they made friends and everlasting memories.

Today, the old building is long past its prime — an eyesore to downtown Mount Prospect — and is scheduled for demolition shortly to make way for a new public library. When it is razed, however, more than bricks and mortar will tumble; a chunk of colorful Mount Prospect history will go with it.

Indeed, Central School, at the southeast corner of Central Road and Main Street, has been around almost as long as the village itself. During its 47-year stint, the building evolved from an ultra-modern four-room schoolhouse to a 15-room school that in the end couldn't pass state safety standards without improvements that would have cost more than the original structure.

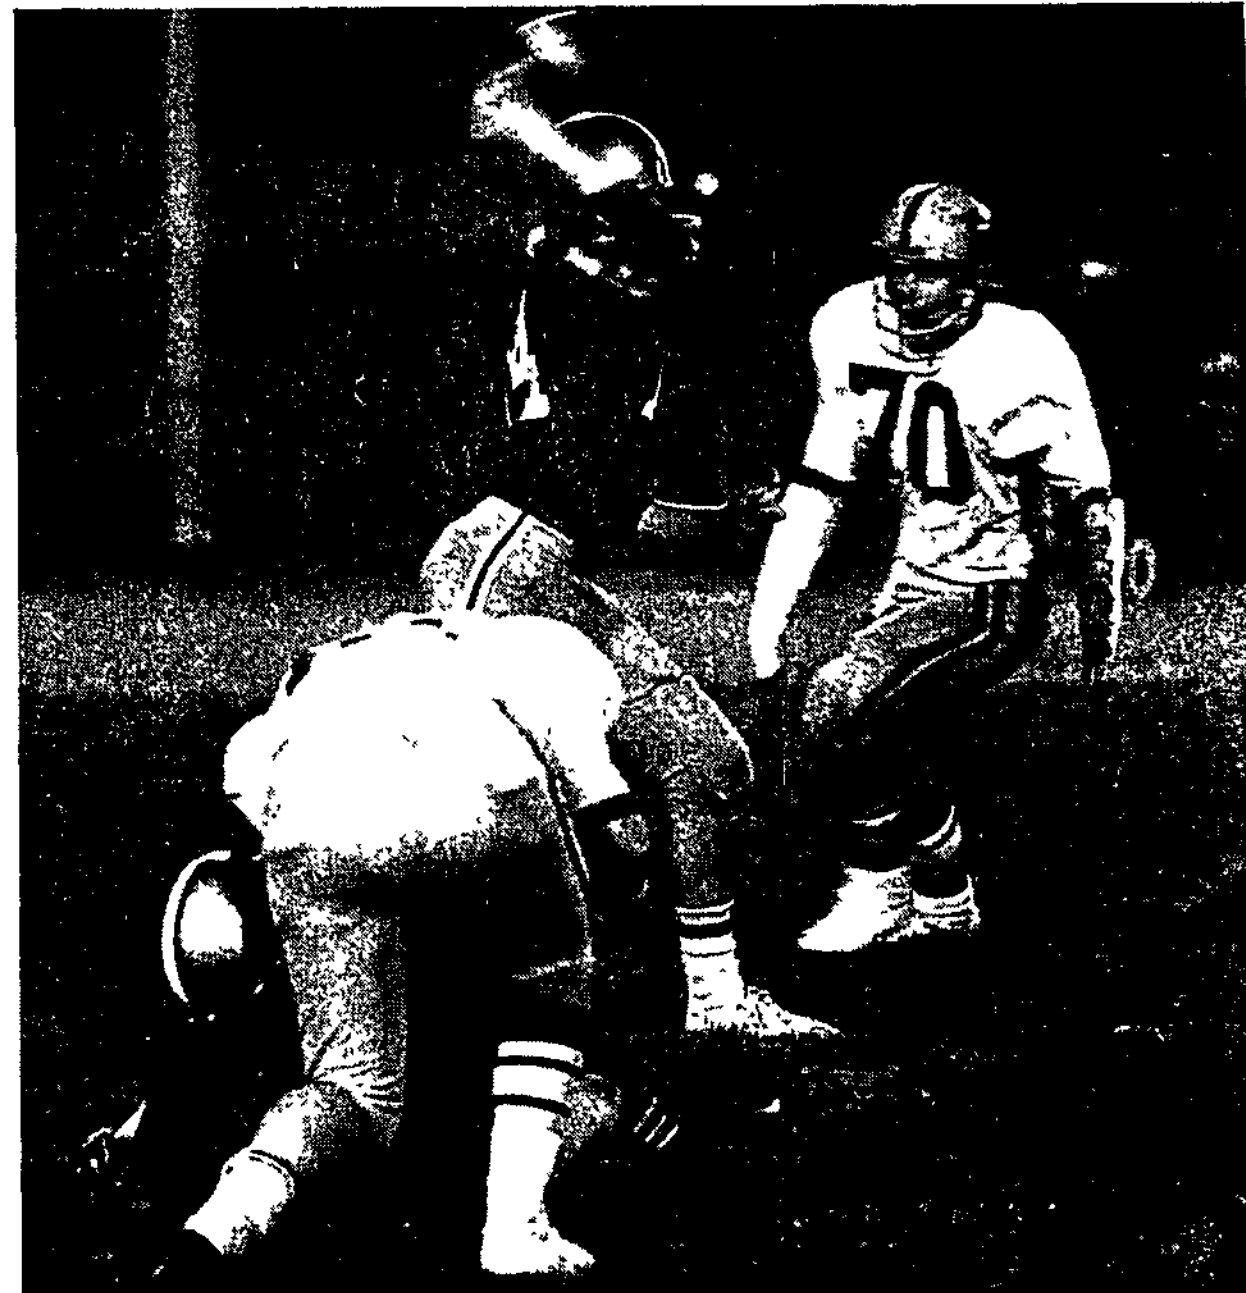

WHEN THE SCHOOL was closed by Mount Prospect Dist. 57 in 1970 and its students sent to Gregory School, developers as well as village and park district officials stood in line with plans to tear down the building and replace it with — a grocery store, an office building, a civic center, a park and a high-rise apartment building for the elderly. The use ultimately chosen, a library, was actually suggested as long ago as 1966.

Central School opened its doors in 1927, replacing an earlier school that was converted to a community hall and later

Backyard carnivals aid charities

Backyard carnivals were all over town this summer to benefit a variety of causes. A recent one was held in the Camelot subdivision of Mount Prospect with the Diabetes Assn. as the beneficiary.

Eight youngsters were involved in the project and they netted $18 for their cause. They sold cookies, Kool-Aid and tickets for four games, had a gypsy fortune teller and a raffle for a huge lollipop. The children involved were Stefanie and Debbie Bell; Julie, Billy and Tony Joy; Laurie and Donald Mountz; and Kathy Doherty.

The kids picked the Diabetes Assn. as their charity because Stefanie and Debbie's uncle is a diabetic at Hines Hospital, Kathy's father is a diabetic and Laurie's and Donald's father is a borderline diabetic.

FIVE YOUNG people from South Church-Community Baptist recently spent a week at Green Lake, Wis. where they cut a new cross-country ski trail at the American Baptist Assembly. They appropriately named the path "The South Trail" in honor of South Church.

Working on the project were Pat Laler, Bill Reinert, Karen Scott, Pat Reinert and Mike Hinton.

BURT AND Alice Olcott, 220 N. Emerson St., will be celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary Sept. 16 with a family gathering. The couples three children, a son and daughter from Wisconsin and a son from Georgia, will be on hand for the event as will other relatives from various places.

The Olcotts were married a half century ago in Glenview, Alice's hometown. Burt is from Chicago. They have 10 grandchildren and one great grandson.

The Olcotts have been in Mount Prospect for the last 22 years. They also have lived in Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin. Burt has been retired for the last seven years. He previously worked at the Insurance Exchange Building.

BY THE WAY, a recent column told about Dentists Cole and Daniels' trip to Russia as described by Cole's wife Esther. She told of an oppressive atmosphere, a backwards nature, how glad she was to get home.

Dr. Daniels called to report that he and his family felt entirely different. "It's true that there are no Holiday Inns there," he said, "but we enjoyed the visit to that country. I was there previously and hope to go again."

ARE YOU AWARE of the fact that the Mount Prospect Public Library has 78 art prints available to card holders. They are all beautifully framed, ready to hang and cost users $1 for four weeks of use.

The most popular pictures are "A Bunch of Flowers" by Novak; "Girls By The Seaside — 1894," Renoir; "Horn Aboard," Dawson; "Man in a Golden Helmet," Rembrandt; "The Sweep," Wyeth; and "Angelica and Delphiniums," Buffet.

It's really a honey of a problem

The Richard Jordan family uncovered a sticky situation — bees in the walls

by LINDA PUNCH

Winnie the Pooh would love the Richard Jordans. The Des Plaines family, 143 Stratford Dr., recently uncovered a wall filled with honey while remodeling their home. The honeycomb — complete with bees — measured approximately six feet tall, three feet wide and one foot deep, Jordan said.

Although the family has lived in the house since 1970, Jordan said the bees caused no problems until a painter tried to paint the eaves of the roof.

"We noticed the bees before but nothing serious ever happened," he said. "There's never been any bees in the house and no one's ever been stung."

JORDAN DESCRIBES his encounter with the bees in battlefield terminology. He began by drilling a small hole in the wall and pouring poison in.

"I put my ear to the wall and it sounded like World War III," he said. "The honeycomb was so thick, though, the poison didn't have any effect."

The Oakton Community College dean ran through a series of grocery store pesticides before calling in the reserves — an Oakton biology professor and a University of Illinois entomologist, Stanley Rachesky. Their solution: destroy the honeycomb.

Jordan brought in a carpenter to tear out the wall panels while his fellow professor stood nearby with "a powerful aerosol bomb."

"Everytime a bee came out, she zapped him in mid-air," Jordan said.

RACHESKY CONTRIBUTED a more potent pesticide and Jordan launched a second attack against the bees.

Area woman picked for sex-bias panel

Judy Brady-Keller of Arlington Heights is part of a 24-member task force appointed by State Schools Supt. Michael Bakalis to study sex discrimination in Illinois schools and recommend steps for eliminating it.

Mrs. Keller, 1210 E. Burr Oak Dr., also heads the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Citizens Task Force on Education, a parent group concerned about sex discrimination in local schools.

The state-appointed task force has two immediate duties.

FIRST, THE COMMITTEE will study guidelines for implementing Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, which prohibits sex discrimination in schools. Based on its findings, the task force will provide input for Bakalis to use in making his recommendations on putting the guidelines into effect to the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

Secondly, the task force will make recommendations for textbook guidelines being prepared by Bakalis' office.

Mrs. Keller is one of three persons named to the task force to represent parents and concerned citizens. Others on the committee include State Sen. Esther Saperstein, D-Chicago; State Rep. Susan Catania, R-Chicago; and State Rep. Donald Deuster, R-Mundelein. Illinois teachers, administrators and students also are represented on the task force.

Locally, Mrs. Keller and other members of the Dist. 21 Citizens Task Force on Education last year conducted a survey of educational materials used in the district, which also serves portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

FOLLOWING THE SURVEY, the task force appealed to the school board to make every effort to get rid of materials they found to be sexually-biased.

In response, the school board adopted a policy to eliminate not only materials containing sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination as well.

Mrs. Keller said Friday she plans to continue work on the local task force besides the state committee. The group will be involved in teacher in-service workshops during the year and will serve on textbook selection committees.

moved to serve as an annex to St. John's Episcopal Church. It was much larger than the original schoolhouse — four classrooms — and cost the unusually high sum of $25,000. Today, it will cost more than that just to tear down the building and its two subsequent additions.

Central School alone is where Mount Prospect children learned the three R's during those early years, serving first as an elementary school and later as a junior high. It was the only school in Dist. 57 until Lincoln was constructed in 1948.

By then, Central was beginning to show clear signs of wear, and by 1952, had begun its irreversible decline. The school district superintendent rattled off a bunch of needed improvements: Modernization of the kitchen, erection of a new fence, installation of acoustical tile — which had not been discovered at the time the school was built — just for starters. It was estimated improvements would cost $10,000, and that was just scratching the surface.

FINALLY, in 1967, Assistant Supt. J. C. Busenhardt, now the district's business manager, uttered the words that eventually led to the school's downfall: "It's time," he told board of education members, "to decide whether we want to continue to limp along at Central School or resign ourselves to the fact that we're stuck with it, so let's make the most of it."

His assessment touched off a hot debate. Educators took the position that the district should get rid of the school; it was by then 40 years old and, they said, no longer suitable for a school.

Principal John Gatto said, "There is absolutely no flexibility in the programming of classrooms. Math is being taught in the art room, French in the science lab. Audio visual aids cannot be used in some classrooms due to the inability to shade them. Also, they cannot be used without checking first, since the wiring will not accommodate more than three machines being used in the building at a time."

Team teaching, a relatively new innovation in Central School's final years, was not possible at Central because it had no large rooms, not even an auditorium. Between classes, portable blackboards were moved through the halls to convert, for example, the school library into a classroom. The old wooden floors echoed on the first floor whenever anyone walked to the blackboard on the second floor. The principal's office was not much larger than a closet, making conferences with teachers and parents difficult. Teachers had no lounge and shared lavatories with pupils. On overcast days, when all school lights were on, plugging in a single projector was liable to blow a fuse.

RESIDENTS NONETHELESS were reluctant to see the old school shut down, and defeated two referenda intended to vacate Central School and convert Gregory School to a junior high school.

The school board eventually got its way. District officials, faced with a $38,000 bill for meeting the state's safety code, in 1967 pronounced Central School "a constant drain on the taxpayers' money" and announced their intention to sell it.

Village leaders laid claim to the building. "There's still a lot of life in it," enthused Mayor Dan Congreve, who proposed a civic center.

Park officials too wanted a piece of the action. Robert Jackson, president of the Mount Prospect Park District, was — indeed, still is — attracted to the school's gymnasium. At the very least, he wouldn't have minded seeing the Central School site turned into a village park.

AND DEVELOPERS swarmed around like vultures scenting imminent death. When the building was eventually sold by the school district in an auction, it was taken not by municipal officials — who could have had it for $200,000 less than they're paying today — but by a trust, held by Alexander and Elizabeth Magnus.

In the last four years, a steady stream of developers has come before the village board with a variety of plans for replacing Central School. Each plan was rejected, and village and library officials finally decided they wanted the site.

In the years since the closing of Central School, its classroom windows — for so long an escape for daydreaming pupils — were boarded up and weeds sprouted on the softball field.

If anyone gets the impression, though, that Central School has lost all of its hardness, the building withstood only $10,000 damage during two early-morning arson fires late last month. It's going to take a mighty bulldozer to knock down Central School.

Thrillseekers' fun dives with Evel

by JOE SWICKARD

There were hundreds of Evel Knievels seated in comfortable upholstered seats in the darkened Lincoln Village Theater in Chicago.

In their minds, they weren't suburban stockbrokers or city gas station jockeys. THEY were poised on the edge of the Snake River Canyon, ready to defy death to achieve the American dream of wealth and happiness.

Palms were wet with nervous sweat as well as silk from buttered popcorn as Brooks Brothers-clad Cadillac drivers rubbed shoulders with leather-jacketed "chopper" riders to watch Evel carry his hopes (and theirs) across the gaping Snake River canyon on his steam-powered rocket "cycle."

And just so the spectators, part of 1.8 million nationwide, could be properly attired for the big moment, hawkers offered T-shirts for $3 each. They were embossed with your choice of two full-color portraits of Evel Knievel while you waited.

ABOUT 150 persons bought their all-cotton mementoes to remind them of the bright Sunday afternoon spent watching Knievel, 34, fail in his attempt to span the canyon.

The lobby is carpeted and the management served complimentary coffee to the patrons. Outside, chopped Harleys and their riders arrived, announced by tuned exhaust pipes. Inside the lobby, middle-class heads instinctively turned to the noise.

Carefully stained and worn denim were the Chicago bikers' colors in grimy contrast to the pure white modified rock 'n' roll leather suit worn by Evel.

"Evel's the American ideal, man. He said he was going to do it and I'm going to do it," said the biker with the coiled cobra tattoo.

The cobra-man's buddy chipped in: "He doesn't want to die. Let me tell ya, when you've got three or four million dollars, there ain't no way you want to die."

Bearded, blue jean-clad bikers produced their red tickets for the ushers and swaggered in. They were soon to be lost in the dark of the theater.

THE THEATER was about three-quarters sold at $10 per seat. The audience was quiet, predominantly middle-class and all white. They were soothed with canned music.

They came in family groups, sometimes three generations together for a Sunday afternoon. The children, as young as five and six, chattered excitedly about Evel. He was always "Evel" when there's a possibility that someone is going to kill himself before your eyes and you've paid $10 for the view, it's strictly on a first name only basis.

Three teen-age boys arrived, found seats and one ran back for the buttered popcorn.

Sliding into their seats and looping their legs over the seat in front, one said, "It's amazing the way he bounces."

HIS FRIEND answered, "Oh, yea. Did you ever really see him? He looks like a dummy."

The house lights dimmed and the theater broke into cheers, whistles, and cat-calls. It was like the giant cartoon carnivals where mothers can ditch their kids on dollar day in Peoria.

The screen flickered with diagonals slashes and the image of Snake Canyon, Idaho, came into blurry view.

It focused to the strains of the "Ballad of Evel Knievel."

The chaplain of Bourbon street was introduced, and he asked the audience to pray with him. This was the event, he intoned, that we all are "blowing our heads to watch." He ended his prayer. "It's fun to be saved. Amen."

And the audience cheered.

People took the opportunity during the exhibitions of an African psychic riding blindfolded through flames and spears and the feats of Sensational Parker "king of the sway pole." to run out for more refreshments.

The T-shirt man admitted he was doing OK. He also works the auto and dog shows."

"IF HE DIES, I don't know," he shrugged. "Probably raise the price, it would be a commemorative item, I guess," he said.

Evel appeared on the screen, greeted by applause from the audience. He seemed nervous and hyperventilating. He told the closed-circuit crowd to "live like God made you to" and not to take narcotics.

While Evel made his last-minute preparations, film clips of his accidents were shown. In slow motion again and again he tumbled, clothes tearing and bones breaking. People gasped and whispered in the dark.

Evel was hoisted into the X-2 rocket "cycle" with a crane and was strapped in. One of the teen-agers hunched further into his seat, and said slowly, "Go get 'em, Evel. Get down."

The blast came and it was immediate.

Will add 10 cents to levy

Village expects 12.7% increase in tax rate

The Village of Arlington Heights tax rate will increase 12.7 per cent next year if the latest projections of government cost and assessed valuation prove correct.

A tax levy ordinance to be adopted tonight by the Arlington Heights Village Board is expected to add 10 cents to the 1975 village property tax levy.

That means that an Arlington Heights homeowner whose property is assessed at $10,000 and who paid $78.60 in property tax to the village this year will pay $88.60 next year.

A combination of increased government costs and a lower total assessed valuation than had earlier been predicted are responsible for the anticipated tax increase, said Kenneth M. Bonder, Arlington Heights finance director.

BONDER'S ESTIMATE of next year's assessed valuation has been reduced from $350 million to $315 million, reflecting a dramatic decline in new construction throughout the village.

At the same time, revenue from the local property tax is being increased some $300,000, from $2.4 million to $2.7 million.

The tax levy ordinance already has been approved by the village board's finance committee, and the trustees have little choice but to approve the ordinance since state law requires that it be filed with the county clerk by tomorrow.

A tax levy ordinance adopted by the Mount Prospect Village Board earlier this month projected a 21.2 per cent village tax rate increase, from $78.10 per $10,000 assessed valuation to an estimated $94.60 in 1975.

He said the village was "too far into the budget year to change the amount of the levy."

The village tax rate is one of 12 separate levies that together make up the annual real estate property tax bill. The $2.7 million to be raised by the local property tax represents only 12 per cent of the total $14.1 million Arlington Heights budget for 1974-75.

Other funds are derived from sales tax, motor fuel taxes, fees and federal revenue sharing.

Jill Ziske crowned 'Miss Junior Teen'

Jill Ziske, 15, of 317 N. Carlyle, Arlington Heights, was crowned "Miss Junior Teen" Aug. 31 at Randhurst Shopping Center mall. More than 41 girls from the Northwest suburbs competed for the title sponsored by Montgomery Ward stores and Teen Magazine.

Track to ask 5-year extension of annex pact

The Arlington Heights Village Board tonight will give its first formal consideration to a possible extension of the village's annexation agreement with Arlington Park Race Track.

Racetrack officials have asked to extend the agreement for five more years, through Oct. 20, 1974, in order to give them more time to complete plans for a 5,716-unit housing development west of the race track and north of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Among other things, the annexation agreement freezes the cost of building fees and allows virtually unrestricted high-rise development. The proposed housing plan includes the eventual development of 12 apartment buildings of 33 stories each.

The annexation agreement was originally signed on Oct. 20, 1969 and will expire on that date this year unless the village board agrees to extend it.

Thoroughbred season ends on upswing

Wagering, attendance up at race track

by KURT BAER

Arlington Park Race Track closed out one of the most successful horse racing seasons in Illinois history Saturday.

Total wagering at Arlington Park this summer increased 21 per cent over the track's 1973 meeting to a record $137,543,902. Attendance was up 16 per cent from 1,032,607 fans in 1973, to 1,215,333 this year.

Blessed with prime summer dates from the Illinois Racing Board and able to build upon an up turn in Chicago area racing that began early this spring at Sportsman's Park, Arlington Park officials were understandably pleased with Saturday's final figures.

"The Chicago racing public's response to the Illinois Racing Board's awarding of the complete summer dates to Arlington and the improvement of the quality of thoroughbreds racing here it engendered has been dramatic," said track Pres. John F. Loomer.

Wagering, attendance up at race track

"NEW ILLINOIS mutuel records were set and attendance was excellent, while declines were being registered in other parts of the country."

Last November, during hearings on 1974 racing dates before the Illinois Racing Board, Loomer warned that another bad year like the one Arlington Park suffered in 1973 could lead the track's owner, Madison Square Garden Corp., to shut down the Midwest's largest horse racing plant.

Arlington Park was crippled by early spring racing dates in 1973, even though the length of that meeting, 63 days, was only one day shorter than this year's season.

Another measure of the track's success is to compare Arlington Park's 1974 figures against figures for the same dates in 1973. This comparison shows betting this year at Arlington Park was 13 per cent higher while attendance increased by 7 per cent.

WALTZING IN COMBAT are Hersey halfback Steve Block carried eight times for 48 yards to help pace the Block and Rolling Meadows defensive back Ted Tyk. Huskies to a 24-6 triumph. See Sports.

Recent Illinois legislation makes it possible for municipalities to renew land-annexation agreements that previously could not be lengthened beyond the original five-year period.

Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel has said that a public hearing on the race track request will have to be held, although tonight's village board meeting has not been formally designated as a public hearing.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. at the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Bakalis names Arlington woman to sex-bias unit

Judy Brady-Keller of Arlington Heights is part of a 24-member task force appointed by State Schools Supt. Michael Bakalis to study sex discrimination in Illinois schools and recommend steps for eliminating it.

Mrs. Keller, 1210 E. Burr Oak Dr., also heads the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Citizens Task Force on Education, a parent group concerned about sex discrimination in local schools.

The state-appointed task force has two immediate duties.

FIRST, THE COMMITTEE will study guidelines for implementing Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, which prohibits sex discrimination in schools. Based on its findings, the task force will provide input for Bakalis to use in making his recommendations on putting the guidelines into effect to the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

Secondly, the task force will make recommendations for textbook guidelines being prepared by Bakalis' office.

Mrs. Keller is one of three persons named to the task force to represent parents and concerned citizens. Others on the committee include State Sen. Esther Saperstein, D-Chicago; State Rep. Susan Catania, R-Chicago, and State Rep. Donald Deuster, R-Mundelein. Illinois teachers, administrators and students also are represented on the task force.

Locally, Mrs. Keller and other members of the Dist. 21 Citizens Task Force on Education last year conducted a survey of educational materials used in the district, which also serves portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

FOLLOWING THE SURVEY, the task force appealed to the school board to make every effort to get rid of materials they found to be sexually-biased.

In response, the school board adopted a policy to eliminate not only materials containing sexual bias, but all other forms of discrimination as well.

Mrs. Keller said Friday she plans to continue work on the local task force besides the state committee. The group will be involved in teacher in-service workshops during the year and will serve on textbook selection committees.

Body found at race track

The partially decomposed body of a 37-year-old man was discovered in a tack-room at Arlington Park Race Track early Sunday.

Arlington Heights police say the man, Robert C. Kranz, is believed to have been a stable worker at the race track. There was no immediate indication of the cause of death, although Kranz did have a history of poor health, according to police.

The exact time of death had not been determined Sunday, but police estimated that Kranz had been dead for several days. The case is under investigation by the police department's detective bureau.

Papo Security officers, who discovered the corpse in one of the race track barns, called the police department at 7:39 Sunday morning.

The Cook County Coroner's Office has been notified of the case, and at the coroner's direction, the body was removed to an area funeral home.

Recreation Park pool to remain open

The outdoor swimming pool at Recreation Park will remain open as long as weather permits, the Arlington Heights Park District has announced.

The pool, which is heated, will be open during the week from 4 to 9 p.m., and on the weekends from 1 to 9 p.m.

The pool will be opened at the pool manager's discretion.

The indoor pool at Olympic Park will reopen Sept. 9.

Admission to both pools is by annual pass or daily fee. Residents fees are children $1 and adults $1.25. Nonresidents fees are children $2, and adults $2.50.

Annual swimming passes are now available at local parks. The passes are good for 12 months.

Parents unit plans music demonstration

Demonstrations of the Shinichi Suzuki method of musical instruction will be given tonight at Thomas Junior High School and Tuesday night at South Junior High School, sponsored by Music for Youth. Both demonstrations will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Music for Youth is a parent-operated, non-profit organization for string-instrument instruction in Arlington Heights Dist. 25 schools. There are weekly group lessons supplemented by a class for the Suzuki students.

There will be a question and answer session after each demonstration.

Coronets drill team gets new leadership

The Arlington Heights Coronets will have a new director and head instructor this year, replacing their former director and founder Lynn Lindstrom, who recently retired.

Ernie Zimney, a three-year instructor with the Coronets is taking over the directorship of the drill team. Zimney, a foreman at Illinois Tool Works of Chicago, will arrange the Coronets' entries in parades and contests, said Kathy Dougherty, co-captain of the Coronets.

Brian Johnson, a student at Loyola University Law School, will be the Coronets' new head instructor. He will head the team of instructors.

Mrs. Lindstrom and her husband will continue to write the Coronets' drills.

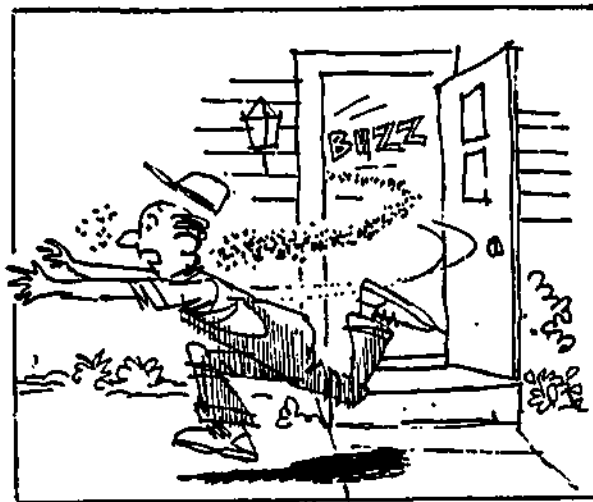

Kiwanis to raise funds on Peanut Day

The Arlington Heights Kiwanis Club will be passing out peanuts to the residents of Arlington Heights for the Kiwanis Kids Day Peanut Sale Sept. 27. Passersby are encouraged to give donations for the peanuts which will go to support local youth activities.

The money collected will remain in the community to support causes such as aid to handicapped and underprivileged children, educational scholarships and summer camps for needy youngsters.

The Kiwanians invite volunteers to help pass out peanuts Sept. 27. If interested please contact: George Petry, 17 W. Davis St., Arlington Heights.

It's really a honey of a problem

The Richard Jordan family uncovered a sticky situation — bees in the walls

by LINDA PUNCH

Winnie the Pooh would love the Richard Jordans.

The Des Plaines family, 143 Stratford Dr., recently uncovered a wall filled with honey while remodeling their home. The honeycomb — complete with bees — measured approximately six feet tall, three feet wide and one foot deep, Jordan said.

Although the family has lived in the house since 1970, Jordan said the bees caused no problems until a painter tried to paint the eaves of the roof.

"We noticed the bees before but nothing serious ever happened," he said. "There's never been any bees in the house and no one's ever been stung."

JORDAN DESCRIBES his encounter with the bees in battlefield terminology. He began by drilling a small hole in the wall and pouring poison in.

"I put my ear to the wall and it sounded like World War III," he said. "The honeycomb was so thick, though, the poison didn't have any effect."

The Oakton Community College dean ran through a series of grocery store pesticides before calling in the reserves — an Oakton biology professor and a University of Illinois entomologist, Stanley Rachesky. Their solution: destroy the honeycomb.

Jordan brought in a carpenter to tear out the wall panels while his fellow professor stood nearby with "a powerful aerosol bomb."

"Everytime a bee came out, she zapped him in mid-air," Jordan said.

RACHESKY CONTRIBUTED a more potent pesticide and Jordan launched a second attack against the bees.

"It was like a circus — the bees just kept making noise," he said. "Nobody got stung — it was absolutely amazing."

When the wall board was torn out, Jordan said bees were "still there even though we must have killed a zillion."

"We stuck a chisel in the wall and honey ran down onto the floor. The really terrible thing is we destroyed all that honey with the pesticides," he said.

JORDAN SAID THE run-in with the bee colony unnerved him, especially since he saw the movie "The Hellstrom Chronicle" about insects taking over the world.

"The night before we mounted the final assault we could hear the bees buzzing behind the cardboard," he said. "It was just like Hitchcock movie — my wife kept checking the bedroom door to be sure it was closed."

"These bees are programmed to build perfect hexagons without shutting each other off. They've got to be as smart as all get out," he added.

Jordan received numerous suggestions from friends and family for getting rid of the unwanted bees. One college student suggested renting a bear.

"She said we should turn the bear loose in the house and he could take care of the bees and the honey," he said.

CLEANUP IS THE major problem of the Jordans now that the bees are dead. The honeycomb and beeswax were carried out in shovelfuls, Jordan said, noting that his wife used to buy beeswax for her weaving projects.

"I noticed that she hasn't asked me to save her any," he added.

Removing honey from the hallway carpeting and woodwork was "messy," Jordan said, noting that "you can't use a wire brush — you almost have to use a spoon."

Despite the ripped-out walls and inconvenience, Jordan views the Battle of the Bees in good humor.

"There's something inherently funny about the situation," he said. "People just kept coming up with all sorts of outlandish jokes."

Pawelko to direct drive

Four to head village's '74 United Fund campaign

A team of four officers will head the United Fund's efforts in Arlington Heights this year.

Edward Pawelko is the 1974 United Fund president. Backing Pawelko are Reed Clark, vice president; James Dodds, treasurer, and Joy Spockham, secretary.

Working with the officers on specific campaigns will be several chairpersons and assistants. Heading the campaign to solicit funds from industry and business will be Bea Harris with help from Harold Bell, Barth Hansen and Ronald Spears.

United Fund campaigns in the schools will be organized by John Fish and his assistant, Alfred Snap. Reed Clark and Fred Breheim are co-chairmen of the residential fund drive.

A person to organize fund raising among professionals has not been found.

Matthew Gallo will assist in soliciting contributions from lawyers, doctors, dentists and other professionals.

Margie Flanders will conduct United publicity locally with the assistance of H. G. McAuley and Earl Johnson.

United Fund has an office at 115 W. Fremont St., Arlington Heights, for persons with questions about the United Fund drive. The office manager is Judy Reading. Telephone number is 259-2007.

Contributions collected in Arlington Heights will go to such Northwest suburban area organizations as the Volunteer Service Bureau, Clearbrook Center, Boy and Girl Scouts, 4-H clubs and Omni House: Youth Service Bureau.

The drive already has begun with thousands of letters sent this week to local residents. The United Fund's objective this year is to raise $70,000 locally.

In Arlington, Buffalo Grove

Western Illinois graduate to direct Campus Life clubs

A new staff leader for Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove high school Campus Life clubs has been named by the North Chicago chapter of Youth for Christ. The Buffalo Grove club was initiated by the new staff leader this summer.

Tim Sylvester, 22, a recent graduate of Western Illinois University, and a psychology major says he plans to make a career of youth ministry. He is beginning a one-year internship training program with North Area Youth for Christ, and says he plans to stay with Youth for Christ locally for a number of years.

As a Youth for Christ staff member Sylvester says he counsels students, takes groups on retreats and conducts weekly club meetings. The basic objective of the programs, he says, is to help students develop a "balanced life."

Valenza seeks cut in sentence

Former Wheeling official to appear in court today

Former Wheeling trustee Michael Valenza will appear in U. S. District Court at 10 a.m. today to request a reduction in his nine-month prison sentence for conspiracy to commit extortion.

Valenza, who was scheduled to begin his sentence Aug. 23, was granted a delay so he could be in court to argue for a reduced sentence before Judge Bernard Decker.

The former trustee pleaded guilty Feb. 28 to conspiring with then Wheeling Building Director William Bieber to extort $10,000 of furniture from Wickes, Inc. He is one of six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials indicted Jan. 31 following a year-long federal probe into shakedowns of Wheeling developers. Four of the six have pleaded guilty and three have been sentenced to prison terms.

The U. S. Attorney's Office has testified that Valenza cooperated fully in the Wheeling investigation. The former trustee testified before a grand jury the day he was arrested, and also testified at the trial of former trustee William Hart.

Valenza's attorney is expected to use his clients' cooperation with the government in his arguments for reduced sentence.

Village awarded 'Bicentennial' label

The Village of Arlington Heights has been named an official "Bicentennial community" by the U. S. Bicentennial Administration.

The designation helps open the door to financial aid for local Bicentennial programs and affiliates Arlington Heights with the national bicentennial administration, said George Weinand, village community relations officer.

Dwight F. Walton, 1612 N. Douglas Ave., is chairman of the Arlington Heights Bicentennial Commission, which had applied for federal recognition.

Sam DiCara becomes certified executive

An Arlington Heights man has been recognized as a Certified Association Executive of the American Society of Association Executives. Sam F. DiCara, 1703 S. Milbrook Ln., is a deputy director of Bank Administration Institute, Park Ridge, and has been with the institute for more than 20 years.
